Lindbergh's Accident Clouds, Baby Size
The Flanagans

COLONEL LINDBERGH, injured, it is said, in an accident, is confined indoors.

Fortunately the injury to Colonel Lindbergh's shoulder is not serious.

It is useless to talk to Colonel Lindbergh about staying on the ground. But he might promise not to do more than his share of flying.

Napoleon was not ashamed to promise France that he would keep out of danger as much as possible.

A few little clouds, about the size of a baby's hand, not serious. A small bank closed in Delaware and one exchange firm in New England faded into eternity.

To comfort yourself, if you feel, think of people living near Mt. Pelee ordered to leave their homes.

Official observers have noticed "flashes of light" coming through a slit in the volcano's cone, 240 feet high, with underground rumblings. The last eruption of Mt. Pelee was the earth's greatest disaster since the Lisbon earthquake, not including war.

A third brother, Frank Flanagan, called "Dead - Horse," because of time spent in that report, survives.

[illegible] O'Connor, Parnell's follower of the Irish Nationalist born in Ireland, will be buried at his request in English soil, in the Roman Catholic cemetery at Kensal Green.

Cheered in his last moments by a message of sympathy from King George and a blessing from the Pope, the oldest member of the House of Commons died contented.

He said before he died that England and Ireland should be friends. Setting up the Irish Free State had established the era of friendship.

On this day, 177 years ago, in Albemarle county, Virginia, was born John Rogers Clark, victor at Vincennes, organizer of Kentucky, founder of Louisville.

If that particular baby had not been born the region, including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, might now be part of Canada.

At last a national memorial is to be built to commemorate Clark's services to this country.

Three members of United Textile Workers of America were expelled from the Baptist Church in Marion, N. C., for "conduct unbecoming members of the Baptist Church."

Church authorities have postponed indefinitely the trial of those members. That postponement is a good idea.

Once in England a laborer that wandered from one parish to another looking for work without permission was branded on the face with a red hot iron.

No church should take up the branding proposition at this late day.

A thousand fathers of university students learned something about prohibition and its "abolition of whiskey" at Champaign, Ill., on Saturday.

While proud fathers were celebrating "Dad's Day," Sheriff Shaaff raided Gamma Eta Gamma fraternity house, arrested three students, collected 10 gallons of rum.

Gamma Eta Gamma had been buying the liquor for $12 a gallon, retailing it for $32 a gallon. A good profit while it lasted.

Britain thought Russia would resume business, make money and stop bolshevik propaganda among people under British rule.

Russia's official newspaper, Pravda, says "No. We don't ask you to resign from the League of Nations, we don't ask you to stop criticising bolshevism. You must not try to run us."

Stocks Make Good Gains After Earlier Losses

STEEL LEADS UPSWING IN PRICES

Volume of Trading Is Light and Opening With Many Issues Showing Loss

New York, Nov. 19—Stock prices turned upward today after early selling had carried many issues down $1 to $11 a share.

Trading continued relatively light in volume, with the ticker keeping close behind the market.

Steady accumulation of U. S. Steel common, which advanced $2.50 a share to $162.50 before the mid-day mark of the three-hour session was reached, helped to revive confidence.

Johns Manville converted an early loss of $3 a share into a gain of $4. Columbia Carbon extended its early gain to $8.50 and American Can, Atchison, American & Foreign Power, A. M. Byers, J. I. Case, Dupont, New Haven, Public Service of New Jersey and Western Union sold $3 to $4 a share higher.

Few large blocks changed hands in the early trading. One block of 154,000 Kreuger & Toll stock purchase "rights" changed hands at $2 each, unchanged from yesterday's close.

The largest early declines were registered by Allied Chemical, off $11; General American Tank, off $7.75; Atlas Powder, $6.87; Auburn Auto, off $6, and U. S. Freight, United Aircraft, Simmons, Canadian Pacific, Underwood, Elliott, Fisher and Chesapeake & Ohio, off $2 to $4 a share.

On the other hand, Columbian Carbon rallied $5, Western Union $4 and S. H. Kress and Brooklyn Union Gas $2 each.

Total sales in the first half-hour also were 534,100 shares as against 749,200 shares in the same period yesterday.

The New York Central Railroad asked authority from the Interstate Commerce Commission today to issue $5,855,000 equipment trust 4½ per cent gold certificates.

The funds derived from these securities will be used to purchase locomotives and cars.

Market sentiment was reassured by the stability shown in Monday's session as reflected by the relatively small range between the day's high and low prices, and the fact that the Dow-Jones industrial average closed only 1.17 points lower notwithstanding a steady decline throughout the three hours' trading.

Most observers felt the substantial decrease in the volume represented the advent of a period of dullness in the general list, and this belief was strengthened by the comparatively light turnover.

La Guardia Spent Nothing

New York, Nov. 19 (INS)—The personal expense account of Rep Fiorello H. La Guardia, defeated Republican-Fusionist candidate for mayor, on file today, revealed he neither spent nor received any money for his campaign.

LindyMishap Revealed by X-Ray

Englewood, N. J., Nov. 19 (AP)—Authorities at Englewood Hospital today said X-ray photographs revealed that a dislocation of the shoulder received by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in an airplane mishap in Mexico last winter had "snapped out" again.

The shoulder was reset by Dr. Walter Phillips, it was announced, and the famous flier suffered no ill effect.

FIRE CUTS OFF CAPE PHONES

Ne Bedford, Nov. 19 (AP)—Fire in East Wareham today burned an overhead telephone cable and cut all of Cape Cod from telephonic communication with the outside world. Although repair men went to work immediately, repairs were expected to take some time.

George Moore was alone in his home when he discovered his house was afire. He jumped out of a window. His house and garage were destroyed. The loss is about $5000.

Probe Killing of American in Mexico

Washington, Nov. 19 (INS)—The Mexican authorities and American Consul H. S. Bursley have instituted a search for the unidentified murderer of J. S. Youngblood, an American, at Sonora, Mex., November 15, the State Department was advised today.

Bursley reported Youngblood previously reported attempts to kill him and on October 22 he told the consul he had been shot and wounded.

Seeks Cheaper Living for Working Girls

New York, Nov. 19 (INS)—Finding the average working girl's expenses in New York to be $15.70 weekly, and her salary only between $13 and $15, Miss Frances Perkins, industrial commissioner, launched a plea for cheaper living conditions in an address before the association to promote proper housing for girls, meeting here today.

NAB 2 BURGLAR SUSPECTS IN GUN BATTLE

Youths Captured in Palmer Accused of Attempt to Loot Store

Springfield, Nov. 19—Following a gun battle with the lone night police officer of Palmer, two young men were arrested today charged with breaking and entering in the night time a building owned by Superior Court Judge David F. Dillon and Frances C. Dillon.

The building is a clothing store operated by Gamwell & Butts on Main st., Palmer, and, according to the police, the thieves had loaded 250 suits and 50 overcoats into a truck when discovered.

Nicholas Merola, 22, of Lombard st., Springfield, captured in Palmer, in district court on that town pleaded guilty to the break and was held in $5000 for the grand jury.

Fred Grasso, 17, of Meadow st., Agawam, charged with being his accomplice, was arraigned while driving a small truck in which was a new suitcase containing men's furnishings from the Palmer store. He will be arraigned tomorrow.

The arrest of the two youths, although made by Springfield inspectors headed by John P. Cleary was due to the courage of Night Patrolman Charles B. Thomas of Palmer.

Thomas discovered a truck backed up to the rear door of Gamwell & Butts store, and approached to investigate. A man on the truck ordered him to halt, adding he would shoot if the officer advanced another step.

Disregarding the threat, Thomas drew nearer and the truck driver opened fire at him, sending two shots close to his body.

The policeman drew his revolver and returned the fire, but none of the shots took effect. The man on the truck leaped to the ground and entering the store through the rear door, escaped with two others who were inside, by means of the front entrance.

Thomas gave the alarm which was flashed to Springfield, and a short time later Merola was picked up by Springfield inspectors on the outskirts of Palmer. In court he pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking and entering. Police say he admits a Sing Sing record.

Armed Guard Posted at Hijacker Trial

Providence, Nov. 19—Riot guns will cover the trial here tomorrow of seven alleged hijackers in one of the most elaborate safety measures adopted in the court history of Rhode Island.

With the reason shrouded in secrecy, federal officers made final plans today to assure an uninterrupted trial of the defendants who are charged with stealing 200 cases of liquor from a government warehouse.

The men will go on trial in the United States Court, located on the third floor of the Federal Building.

The defendants are John A. Campbell and Harry "Dutch" Leonard of Middletown, R. I., Joe Green, New [illegible], and Michael Marello, Newport, R. I., Adelard Forcier, Woonsocket, James H. Hannon, alias "The Governor" and former prohibition informer, and Guy R. Kelso, a former prohibition agent.

NEW TUNNEY DEPOSITIONS

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 19 (INS)—Further depositions in the $500,000 alienation of affections suit brought by John S. Fogarty against Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, were to be taken here today.

Fogarty, former plumber of Fort Worth Tex., alleges that his wife, Mrs. Katherine Fogarty, left him after meeting Tunney. The Fogartys were divorced in Fort Worth in 1925. Mrs Fogarty is also suing the former ring champion, charging breach of promise.

Eight depositions were taken at yesterday's session, which was closed to newspaper representatives. Charles J. Martin of New Haven, Ct., directed the taking of depositions and Tunney was represented by Frank Pace of Little Rock.

Mayor Leo P. McLaughlin and Municipal Judge V. S. Edgerwood were among the first witnesses to be called it was said. Fogarty in his complaint charged that Tunney met his wife here in 1924.

Brioni, Italy, Nov. 19 (AP)—Gene Tunney and Mrs. Tunney are planning to sail for the United States from Naples on the steamship Vulcania Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tunney recently returned here after a trip to Germany, where Mrs. Tunney underwent an operation for the removal of her appendix.

HOOVER, RAIL CHIEFS MEET

Washington, Nov. 19 (AP)—Railroad executives invited by President Hoover for the first of the series of business conferences today at the White House, held a preliminary meeting early today at the offices of the American Railway Association.

First arrivals included Hale Holden, chairman of the executive committee of the Southern Pacific; J. J. Kernet, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio, and L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson.

They called on Richard H. Aishton, president of the Railway Association, but none of them had any statement to make in advance of the conference. They desired first to hear the President outline his own ideas and then to determine what their companies individually and collectively might be able to do in the general program for continued business progress.

Besides Secretaries Mellon and Lamont, government officials attending the railway executives' conference included Chairman Lewis of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

All of the railroad presidents invited were present with the exception of Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio, who is ill with bronchitis.

The rail heads were gathered at the executive offices well ahead of the hour set for the meeting (11 a. m., and were welcomed by Mr Mellon, who went from the cabinet room to the reception room to greet the officials, all of whom are well known to him personally.

The President called the conference to order in the cabinet room promptly at 11 a. m. and outlined his purpose in summoning the gathering. There followed a general discussion as to the part the transportation systems could take in the whole program to accelerate progress in the commercial, industrial and agricultural fields.

DEAF BOY, 10, HEARS; LAME GIRL WALKS AT TOMB

Maine Priest Leads 22 Pilgrims, Seven of Them Cripples, to Grave

Clayton Golden heard sound for the first time in five years and Mary Ellen Trobelle walked for the first time in 24.

In the throng that had swelled to 15,000 before noon were a priest with ab and of 22 pilgrims from Lisbon Falls, Me., and a Boston society leader came to pray for the recovery of a sister in ill health.

The pilgrimage from Lisbon Falls, coming over the road in a chartered bus early today, and Mrs. Curtis Guild, arriving with her sister in a large limousine, were the contrasting highlights of the processional. Alike they were rich in faith.

CELEBRATES FIRST MASS

Rev. Felix C. Felicko brought the pilgrims, seven of whom are cripples, down from the little Maine town, arriving in Malden at 6:30, just at daybreak.

All went to St. Joseph's Church, where the visiting priest celebrated mass. They then left for the grave of Fr. Power, where together they knelt in the bright morning. After prayer they went to the chapel.

Mrs. Guild was driven into the cemetery with her sister, Mrs. John Lavelle of Boston, and Miss Catherine O'Neil.

The three women knelt in prayer at the shrine and made a short visit to the chapel. Advised to comment upon the throngs at the grave, the widow of former Governor Curtis Guild declared:

"It is a wonderful expression of faith."

DEAF CAN HEAR.

The two cures were reported during the early morning hours. Clayton Golden, 10, of 2 Leonard st., Amesbury, knelt with his parents at the grave and after prayer could hear speech for the first time in five years.

Two hours later, Mary Ellen Trobelli, of 15 Dempsey pl., Lowell, arose from her knees at the grave and walked to the automobile in which she had arrived at the cemetery. It was the first time in 24 years she had taken a step, it was said. Her mother, Mrs. Victoria Trobelle, and her brother Wolfred, accompanied her.

EXTRA POLICE THERE.

The beautiful day, following yesterday's storm, resulted in one of the largest early crowds since the rites were first reported, and Joseph Walsh, assistant superintendent of the cemetery, predicted the largest week-day throng.

Metropolitan police were called into guard duty for the first time, surrounding the tomb and keeping the long lines moving. One officer was on horseback.

Through the night pilgrims arrived and departed in little groups. Many remained through the night at the shrine of cures.

During one of the worst storms since early summer, more than 25,000 persons had braved the drenching rain to pray before the little grave. And among them was Jack Sharkey, boxer, who knelt humbly in the mud and asked Divine aid for his baby daughter.

Sharkey arrived at the height of the downpour and passed through the cemetery paths to the grave hardly noticed. There, he sank to his knees and prayed for several minutes, asking that sight be restored to his little family, who has been blind in one eye since birth.

Leading doctors in the East have tried to aid Dorothy without success, but the man, whose work in the printing trade has brought much of the world's goods, knelt before the grave of the priest with faith that his daughter could be helped.

ASKS FOR PRAYERS

The lame, the halt and the blind in thousands surrounded Sharkey as he prayed, and he was deeply impressed.

Babes in arms, men and women who have been unable to move without aid, were there. They came in a long, unending procession, standing patiently in line until it came their turn to kneel in prayer.

A nine-year-old girl, crippled for six years, played the leading role in one of the most heart-stirring incidents of the day. She is Ruth Bobier of Boyd st., Newton, a child of non-Catholic parentage, yet with a firm and reverent faith in the efficacy of the shrine to aid the afflicted.

She was taken to the grave by Edward Thieriault of the Newton Knights of Columbus, who had heard of her desire to pray at the shrine. Ruth, her legs painfully bound in iron braces from ankle to thigh, hobbled on crutches from Thieriault's automobile to the grave.

Thieriault removed his hat and motioned to the throng that surrounded the shrine, telling them of Ruth's girlish condition and the faith that brought her there. Then he knelt at the side of the girl, the rain pouring down on his uncovered head, and asked the other pilgrims to join in prayer for her.

TEN CURES REPORTED

A solemn, impressive chant arose, as the scores around the grave joined in reciting the Lord's Prayer. Little Ruth, frightened by the spectacle, began to sob as she was gently led away.

During the day seven cures were reported.

Miss Claire La Flamme, a 19-year-old girl, who lives in Gershon ave. Lowell, came to the grave on the arms of two friends, a victim, she told reporters, of a spine affliction which she had had for the past two years, and which made it impossible for her to walk alone. After a few minutes spent in prayer at the grave, she arose unaided, and walked away unaided, although unsteadily.

Russell Allen, 10, of Manchester, N. H., was carried to the grave by his father and mother, who stated that the boy has been unable to walk since birth. He was laid on a cloth at the head of the grave, for some minutes.

A few minutes later he was lifted to a clear place beyond the grave by his father, and with strong hands under his shoulders, placed his feet on the ground and took a few faltering steps. This is the first time in his life that he has been able to do this, his father said.

GAINS SIGHT

James Sylvester, a 73-year-old inmate of the Old Folks' Home at Pawtucket, R. I., was led to the shrine by friends. He knelt in the rain for a few minutes in prayer. A moment later he raised his head, excitedly, and exclaimed, bewilderedly, "I can see!"

On being questioned, the old man said that he has been partially blind for many years, able only to see shadows. When he left the grave, though his vision was not perfect, he could distinguish the figures of the persons around the grave according to his own story.

Van Maksabedian, three, a bright-eyed, cheerful child, with a left leg that has always been lame, came to the shrine with his father. After a short stay at the grave head, he arose, took his father's hand, and started to walk around the restricted area about the grave. His limp was not gone. The leg was still stiffly held in front of him. But the father exultingly declared that he walked much better.

MOVES FINGERS

Mrs. Roland McKenzie, a 50-year-old resident of Beckwith Circle, Somerville, was brought to the grave in an ambulance. Reclining painfully on a stretcher, what was placed beside the grave, she closed her eyes for minutes, while her lips moved in prayer. As she prayed, she extended one hand and began to move the fingers.

She opened her eyes, stared in alarm at the moving fingers, then exclaimed hoarsely, "My fingers! I can move them!" Her friends declared that she has been unable to move for many years, and that her hands have been paralyzed for many years.

A 15-year-old girl, Helen Keefe, of Montana st., Brighton, came to the shrine on crutches with injuries to both hips, sustained three years ago.

TO CLOSE AT NIGHT

She was led to the grave on crutches and supported on both sides as she painfully knelt to pray. She rose, supported by strong arms, but without the crutches, and walked to a waiting car without them.

"I feel much better," was her laconic but joyous answer to questions.

William J. Green said after praying at the grave, on his fourth visit, that a painful hip, which he injured 22 years ago in an accident, was restored to a comfortable condition.

"I don't feel any pain in it at all," he declared. He still walked with a slight limp, however.

Police officials have had in the ordering of the shrine a bit more forcibly when Acting-Chief John Aylward made a tour of inspection of the whole cemetery viewed conditions at first hand and announced that in the near future the cemetery will be closed to the public at night.

War Chief's Body to Lie in White House

Washington, Nov. 19—The body of James William Good, Secretary of War, will lie in state at the White House. This privilege was tendered by President Hoover to Mrs. Good following the death of her husband.

It is planned to have funeral services in the east room of the White House prior to forwarding the body to Cedar Rapids, Ia., Secretary Good's home, for interment.

Those attending the ceremonies will include Vice-President Curtis, members of the diplomatic corps, delegations from House and Senate and members of the family of the late War Department head.

The public will not be admitted to the White House but after the services, employes of the War Department will be permitted to enter to view the body of their late chief.

The body will be accompanied to Iowa by Mrs. Good, her two sons, Acting Secretary Hurley, Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of the Army staff, Senate and House delegations, and a representative of the President.

day by Secretary of State Stimson.

The Cabinet officer's death was referred to as "a national bereavement" and all Government departments and agencies were ordered closed tomorrow until 1 p. m., with the flags on Government property to be half-masted until after the burial services at Cedar Rapids on Friday.

Secretary's Wife and Officer Held in Bail

Gloucester, Nov. 19—Mrs. Elsinor Lucas, wife of the secretary to John Hays Hammond, Jr., who was arrested with William H. Delaney, Boston policeman, in court today waived examination and was held in $400 for the grand jury.

Delaney, who was identified by his superior officer last week when arraigned under a different name, was held at that time.

WILKINS HELD UP BY SLEET AND RAIN

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Commander of the Second Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition

(Copyright, 1929, by the San Francisco Examiner and Universal Service, Inc. Copyright in Great Britain, France, Germany and all other countries. Reproduction prohibited in whole or in part.)

Deception Island, Antarctica, Nov. 19—(Via S. S. Melville and KUP, San Francisco Examiner wireless station) Winds of gale-like force, rains and sleet have confined us to indoor work, thus delaying our preparations.

Alternating freezing and thawing temperatures, such as we are experiencing, create the worst possible conditions on the harbor ice from which we hope to take off from Deception Island.

Newly formed ice coats our machines and every stationary thing. Tarpaulin covers, when moved, crack like shattered glass.

The Melville is moored near the beach, a long floating gang-plank extending from ship to shore. On days like today the gangway, ice-covered, becomes as slippery as the proverbial eel.

Several times the winds blew our feet from under us and we narrowly avoided duckings in the chilly water by clinging desperately to the ice-covered planks and progressing on hands and knees. The barometer indicates the weather will improve.

$10,000 BLAZE IN LOWELL

Lowell, Nov. 19 (AP)—Two fires which started simultaneously in the Odd Fellows Building early today and believed by fire department officials to have been of incendiary origin caused damages estimated at $10,000. The state fire marshal has been asked to make an investigation.

The first fire discovered was in the basement and when firemen arrived they found the other burning briskly on the first floor. The chief damage was sustained by a department store which occupied the ground floor.

PIRATES PERIL SHIPPING IN CHINA SEA

Hongkong, Nov. 19 (AP)—Pirates from the notorious district around Bias bay, near Hongkong, are reported to have resumed activities, taking advantage of the civil war engaging most of the troops in China.

Two gangs have started from Bias bay and it is feared they are contemplating heavy raids. Already one Chinese steamship has been sunk and plundered. In this attack two guards were killed and 70 passengers kidnaped, all being held for ransom. The loot amounted to $20,000.

There was a large increase in Chinese piracy several years ago, but during the past year reports of such incidents have been comparatively few. Bias bay, in the Province of Kwangtung, has been one of the most notorious haunts of pirates along the coast. The bay is not far from Hongkong, which is British territory, and occasionally there have been sharp clashes between British war vessels and pirates.

Negotiates Release of Kidnaped Priest

Shanghai, Nov. 19 (AP)—A Franciscan missionary from Wuchang has arrived at Tayeh, southeastern Hupeh province, and is negotiating with bandits for the release of the Rev. Ulrich Kreutzen of Calumet, Mich.

Kreutzen was kidnaped recently and the Franciscan Mission at Wuchang was asked to send $10,000 Mexican for his release.

The bandits now are demanding 50,000 Mexican. They refused to allow the negotiator to proceed to the place where Kreutzen is being held.

Soviet Troops Shell Chinese Rail Centers

Harbin, Manchuria, Nov. 19 (AP)—Airplane and artillery bombardment by Soviet troops at both ends of the Chinese Eastern railway were reported today. It was believed Soviet forces were trying to cripple the railway by straining at its feet supply.

Advices reaching Harbin today said heavy damage had been inflicted on the Dalainor mines near Manchuli.

According to messages from Khalka, several passengers were killed and others captured by Soviet troops after the bombardment of a crowded passenger train between Manchuli and Khalkar.

Captain to Retire After 51 Years at Sea

Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 19 (AP)—After 51 years at sea, Capt. Piet Van Dam Heuvel, commodore of the Holland-American line fleet, will retire when the steamship Statendam reaches Rotterdam. Then he is going to make a tour of ports at which his ships have called.

Born on his father's freighter he has spent the 60 years of his life on the water except for nine years in school.

Seek Release of 'London Night Queen'

London, Nov. 19 (INS)—The Home Office today was considering an application for the release of Mrs. Kate Merrick, "Queen of London's Night Clubs," and mother-in-law of two peers, from Holloway Prison, where she is serving a 15-month sentence for bribery and conspiracy.

Her release was asked on the ground that she was suffering from heart trouble and needed expert attention.

Heavy Snowfall in Maine Storm

Portland, Me., Nov. 19—A north east gale which swept over Maine began to abate after leaving one to four inches of snow in interior sections of the State and the heaviest rainfall in three years in Portland and along the coast.

Towns in Cumberland County reported a two to four-inch snowfall Skowhegan had three inches; Augusta two inches, Bangor one and a half.

Dr. C. L. French Dead

Clinton, Nov. 19—Dr. Charles L. French for more than 50 years a practitioner in this town died in St. Petersburg, Fla. He was 83 years old.

Robbers Get $22,000; Seal Victims' Lips With Tape

New York, Nov. 19—Four men, wearing dinner coats and posing as musicians, entered an apartment in 4 West Sixty-eighth st. and held up and robbed Carmine Lombardo, orchestra leader, his wife and a woman guest of $2000 and jewelry valued at $20,000.

trial tomorrow. They are Vannie Higgins of New York, held in $25,000 bail in New York, where he is fighting extradition, and James Murray, also of New York, who has not yet been captured.

WAREHOUSE LOOTED

The men are charged with having looted the Providence Storage Company on Harris av. of government liquors and to have then stolen a truck and an automobile owned by the Winward Trucking Co., in which they took the loot away.

District Judge Ira Lloyd Letts and U. S. Marshal Howard C. Arnold today declined to comment on the extraordinary precautions being taken to prevent trouble during the trial. The trial will last several days.

The main door of the building will be locked when the trial opens tomorrow. Two small side entrances will be used.

On upper stairways leading to the third floor, crack shots of the State police will be stationed, in addition to city officers. The upper corridors, likewise, will be under strict guard, while inside the courtroom, court officers, heavily armed, will be on the watch for any untoward incident.

RIOT SQUAD IN RESERVE

It was understood that a reserve force, carrying riot guns, would be maintained in a convenient room.

Since the arrest of the accused gunsette extreme precautions have been taken to prevent their escape and to keep confederates from communicating with them.

The men charged with the actual theft of the liquor, Campbell Leonard, Manello and Green, will answer to their indictment tomorrow.

When this indictment is disposed of, the government will press an indictment alleging conspiracy. Ex-Agent Kelso is included in this list.

Any suspicious person found in or near the building, it was announced, would be taken before Marshal Arnold for questioning and search.

About 10 years ago armed guards patrolled the federal building here when members of the notorious Morelli gang, whose names were later injected into the Sacco-Vanzetti case in Massachusetts, were on trial on robbery charges.

At that time no one was allowed in the building until he could present credentials showing him to be on lawful business.

Hub Needle Trades to Have Meeting

A mass meeting in Ambassador Palace, 12 Berkeley st., will be held tomorrow night under auspices of joint board, Needle Trades Workers Industrial Union, for discussion of questions vitally affecting 3000 cloak and dressmakers of Boston.

Ben Gold, secretary-treasurer of the organization, will be the principal speaker.

NAVAL EXPERT KEEPS MUM ON PARLEY JOB

Secretary Stimson Intimates That Rear-Admiral Jones Will Be Delegate

Washington, Nov. 19—Adjustment of the status of Rear-Admiral Hilary P. Jones on the American delegation to the London conference or his presence on the delegation itself, overshadows all other questions on disarmament in diplomatic and naval circles.

Whether Admiral Jones is to be named as a member of the delegation or is to serve in an advisory capacity only was the question.

Secretary of State Stimson made an optimistic announcement that was counter-balanced by the admiral's impenetrable silence. The secretary announced:

"I have every reason to believe that Admiral Jones is going with me to London."

Indications that the admiral did not agree with the Secretary were drawn from his studied silence and his failure to corroborate the statement of the Secretary of State or give any further explanatory statement of his intentions that the repeated assertion that the "matter was in the hands of the President and the Secretary of State."

Although it was impossible to reach the admiral either at his home or in the offices of the navy general board, it is known that the retired naval authority was in conference with Secretary of the Navy Adams and the chief of naval operations, Admiral Charles F. Hughes, the greater part of the day.

SINCLAIR TO BE OUT FRIDAY

Washington, Nov. 19—Harry F. Sinclair, head of the oil companies bearing his name, who has been a prisoner in the District of Columbia jail since May 8, is packing up preparatory to resuming the role of a citizen at liberty. Sinclair will be a free man again at 12:01 a. m. Friday.

The oil man, it is said, will leave the jail in fine physical shape, despite the fact that during practically all of the six months and 18 days he has been locked up he has been most of the time employed within the prison as a pill-roller in the prison pharmacy.

Sinclair was a druggist before he became an oil prospector. It is said there are enough pills and capsules on hand now to supply the jail for months to come.

Plans for Sinclair's liberation are not being made public at the jail. One report is that friends from New York will be on hand to welcome him on his return to liberty. Another is that his friends in the jail are preparing to make his departure a memorable one. As one story goes, every time a prisoner in the district jail swallows a pill he gives three cheers for the oil man.

Here's Why Women Leave Their Homes

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Why women leave home, by Mrs. Louis Slade, regional director of the New York League of Women Voters.

Grandma wove cloth at home. Men started mills. It was once a disgrace if the housewife failed to can her own fruits and vegetables. Man started the canning factory. Mother baked the bread. Father started a bakery.

Now women must go into the business world to see that men carry on these home occupations in an honest manner.

No Wedding Bells for Mrs. Buchanan

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Herald and Examiner said today that the marriage of Mrs. Katherine Winterbotham Buchanan, former wife of Thomas Buchanan, the playwright, to Dr. Marcellus D. de Redlich, Persian consul-general in Chicago, had been "postponed indefinitely."

Announcement of the postponement was made shortly before the ceremony was to have been performed in St. James' Episcopal Church, the paper said.

STOCK BROKERS IN BANKRUPTCY

Providence, Nov. 19—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in U. S. District court today against Mandeville, Brooks & Chaffee, brokerage houses, by four alleged creditors who claimed they purchased stock which was not delivered to them.

The creditors and the amounts of money they claim are: Alice V. McManus of Providence, $1193, and the following of Central Falls, R. I., Adela Cortez, $1100; Antonio Filipe, $3000, and Manuel Gouveia, $316.

In their petition they alleged the company is insolvent. Judge Ira Letts set November 29 for a hearing.

Officials of the brokerage house yesterday filed a petition in the Superior court for appointment of a receiver and the request was granted. They said the concern has liabilities of over $4,000,000 but has assets to meet these liabilities. They asked for appointment a receiver in order that the business might be wound up in an orderly manner and said no one would suffer financially if that was done.

Back Up Plan to Punish Rum Buyer

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 19—Indorsement of the plan of Senator Morris Sheppard, Texas, to make the buyer of illicit liquor equally guilty with the seller, was contained in a resolution introduced before the 63d annual convention of the National Grange here by State Master George Schlmeyer of California.

PRAYS THAT OTHERS MAY RECOVER

Mrs. Mary Power Gildea Tells Her Impressions of Throngs at the Shrine in Malden

Mrs. Mary Power Gildea of 128 Chestnut st., Brookline, is a niece of the Rev. Patrick J. Power, whose grave is in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden, has become the shrine of the afflicted. She tells her own story of her impressions of the shrine for the readers of the Boston Evening American.

By MARY POWER GILDEA

I have thrice visited the shrine of my beloved uncle, the Rev Fr. Patrick J. Power, in Holy Cross cemetery, Malden, and each time I have come away more deeply impressed by the faith of those afflicted ones to whom his spirit is administering.

Each of my three visits to his grave has been made under different weather conditions, but on each occasion the devout and faithful were before his shrine, praying for salvation, unmindful, apparently, of the weather. I have seen mothers with babies, bundled in furs against the cold. I have seen them, too, in the midst of a steady downpour of rain, clad in protecting garments, or huddled under the scanty shelter of umbrellas.

Throughout the long wait in line their faces shine with expectancy. Their spirits are buoyed by the hope that Fr. Power's immortal presence may cure their ills. My heart goes out to these poor people. From my father, Edward Power, whose grave is in the same holy ground, I heard as a girl of the devotion and piety of Fr. Power to his work and to his Maker.

A patient sufferer himself, Fr. Power's career in the priesthood was cut short by his untimely end, a few short months after his ordination. I cannot help but feel that the work he hoped and prayed might come to pass in his lifetime is being realized after his death, out there in Holy Cross Cemetery. I hope that a lasting monument can be erected there that persons from far distances may come to his shrine and be cured.

Fr. Power, a most pious and devout man, was deeply moved, my father used to say, by the suffering in this world. It was his hope, his ambition, that he might relieve some of the cares of the world during his priesthood. His last prayer on this earth was for others, not for himself.

MUST HAVE FAITH

Those who have faith enough can go now to his shrine and know their prayers will be heard. The unbeliever cannot hope to be cured there. He must first learn the lesson of humility, so wonderfully portrayed by the life and death.

During my first visit to his shrine, I myself was cured of an ill. Some years ago I fell from a step-ladder in my kitchen and injured my ankle. At the time I did not bother to go to a doctor. I let the ankle mend itself as it would. The wound healed, but oftentimes at night the limb pained me severely and I could not sleep.

When I went to pray at the shrine I soaked a handkerchief in the holy water out there in Holy Cross cemetery and applied it to the ankle. I have had no pain since that time.

Fr. Power was the seventh of a line of priests in our family. Even our other relatives, including my father, Edward Power and his brother, John Power, were devout persons whose lives were saint-like in simplicity. We children were not allowed to go to bed until we had recited our rosary. It is devotion such as that, I believe, that accounts for the miracles we hear of at the shrine of Fr. Power.

I saw two miracles performed myself while on my visits to the shrine. My daughter, Mrs. William Francis, was with me on one occasion, when we saw a group gathered about a mother and her child beneath one of the crosses near Fr. Power's grave.

The child was about four years old, possibly five. It looked to me as though it were dying. Its face was deadly white, and there was a pallor to it that frightened me.

SAW BABY WALK

The mother clasped a Sacred Heart medal in her hand and beseeched the child to speak to her. The child did not move.

"Jimmy, Jimmy, speak to me! Speak to mother," she cried.

Then the crowd about the cross knelt and prayed. One girl said the "Our Father" and ten "Hail Mary's." The crowd responded to her leadership. At the end of their supplications the child stirred forth its hands and grasped the sacred heart its mother was holding.

Someone in the crowd, who seemed to know the mother and child, said she knew the baby could walk. And the child did walk. It was wonderful.

Then I saw a Jewish boy. He supported himself by two crutches. He said he had been injured in an automobile accident. One of the women at the shrine asked him if he had partaken of any of the holy water. He said he had not, because he was unable to secure any.

The woman gave him some of the holy water which she so carefully carried. Then a strange thing happend. This Jewish boy blessed himself. Then he drank some of the water.

That day he left one of his crutches at the grave. I asked him if he believed he was cured.

"I do not believe it," he said, "I know it. Tomorrow I shall come back and discard my other crutch for a cane."

These are only two of the many wonderful cures which have taken place at Fr. Power's grave. I saw them myself. The others I have only heard of through outside sources.

When I first learned of the miracles and read in the newspapers how they were seeking relatives who might throw light on his life, I was glad to be of what assistance I could and I went to Fr. Walsh to tell him what I knew. I gave him the address of my brother, Edmund, in Worcester, because I felt he would know more about Fr. Power than I, as he is older.

I only hope this wonderful work may continue and that suffering in the world may be lightened because of the shrine of Fr. Power.

(Another story of Mrs. Gildea's impressions will follow in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Champion Bad Boy at the End of His Rope

Newark, N. J., Nov. 19 (AP)—James Langden, 16, of Bridgeport, Conn., was returned to the State Home for Boys at Jamesburg today by Newark police after having been at liberty since his escape July 27, during which time he said he was incarcerated and escaped twice, was prevented from committing suicide by hanging, robbed 13 stores in three states and stole three automobiles.

He was caught here impersonating a naval officer. The youth, police said, also admitted being an amateur safe cracker. Langden walked into police headquarters just as detectives were discussing a request from Bridgeport authorities asking his arrest.

The youth told a plausible story and was about to be permitted to leave when another prisoner present, a former sailor, remarked that Langden was wearing a coxswain's insignia and that "it would be impossible for a kid like that to earn that rating in four months."

Cops Hunt Man Who Beat Girl Teacher

Fond du Lac, Wis., Nov. 19 (NS)—Petty differences of neighbors over management of a country school were blamed today as police sought an unidentified man who gagged and severely beat and left Clementine Keyes, 20-year-old school teacher, unconscious in the basement of the Blain school near here.

She said her assailant resembled a man who recently visited her father and suggested she resign.

COURT HOLDS 4 IN LOTTERY

New Haven, Nov. 19 (AP)—Four men arrested in the seizure of several million lottery tickets were held in $1000 each today for superior court.

The are Irwin Wener, 34, of West Haven; George S. Smith of Highwood, James J. Kane of Stratford and Walter E. Collier of Hamden.

Police believe they are connected with a State-wide lottery ring with branch offices in Bridgeport, Hartford, Stratford and Waterbury and one in Montreal.

The tickets, stored in three rooms, were seized in a raid on a warehouse. Police Chief Philip T. Smith had received information that the rooms were being used as a central distributing point.

Explorers' Ship Safe In Blizzard

S. S. Discovery, Nov. 19—The Discovery beat its way back to the northeast coast of Kerguelen Island at dawn Saturday, when a rising wind changed its direction, making further progress impossible.

The accompanying heavy snow squalls, obscuring the view, resulted in a few anxious hours for such a low-powered ship as the Discovery. By afternoon the danger cleared and Capt. John King Davis set the course up Royal Sound, arriving by evening at the coal depot, left for us by the Irving Johnson Whaling Co.

The 35-mile journey up the sound was of remarkable interest. The scenery revealed along the winding waterway dotted with innumerable islets proving entrancing. The lower country is carved by extensive ice sheet, which is also responsible for the labyrinthic fiords—narrow channels that are the most prominent feature of this coastal region.

Dominating all were volcanic peaks unnumbered, carrying the marvellous picture to the clouds. The whales and sea birds of every description, sporting in the land-locked waters, little noticed the intrusion of the Discovery.

London, Nov. 19—The Discovery II has just been launched to replace the famous S. S. Discovery, Capt. Scott's old ship, now being used by Sir Douglas Mawson, commander of the British, Australian and New Zealand Antarctic Research Expedition at Kerguelen Island.

The new ship will leave for South Georgia in December. It was launched at Glasgow. Unlike the old Discovery, the new vessel is a steamship with 1300 h. p. engines, and is of steel, with wooden sheathing to resist ice pressure. She will be used to investigate the habits of whales, a project begun three years ago by the Discovery committee.

FLIER EIELSON MISSING IN BLIZZARD

Arctic Rescuer of Six From Ice-Bound Fur Ship Vanishes on Second Trip

New York, Nov. 19 (INS)—The first direct word from Alaska as to how Carl Ben Eielson, veteran polar pilot, became lost in a blizzard while on a rescue mission was received here today.

In a radio message sent from Teller, Alaska, early today, Fyrek Dorbandt, pilot of the plane that accompanied Eielson, and his mechanic, on part of the flight, said: "Eielson sighted by natives 60 miles off North Cape."

This was interpreted as meaning that Eielson was flying at the time and that his plane had not been wrecked in a forced landing, as at first reported.

MAY HAVE LANDED.

It was considered probable that Eielson and his mechanic had landed and were waiting for the blizzard to blow over. There was sufficient food in the plane to sustain the two fliers and warmth could be obtained from the motor, it was said.

Eielson had been missing for ten days when he left Teller on another trip to take off other members of the ice-bound crew of the Seesson for trading schooner Nanuk at North Cape, Siberia.

The message from Dorbandt to Graham B. Grosvenor, president of the aviation corporation, said:

"Eielson and I left Teller for North Cape, Siberia, Nov. 9. One hour out I turned back on account of bad weather. Eielson went on. Blizzard and storm since.

"Eielson sighted by natives sixty miles off North Cape. Did not land. Almost dark. Visibility very poor. Blizzard precludes search from either end yet. Will keep you informed until Eielson located."

HAD RESCUED SIX

Dorbandt is a veteran pilot of the Alaska Airways, Inc., subsidiary of the aviation corporation. Eielson is vice-president and general manager of the Alaskan Airways.

On their previous trip to the Nanuk, Eielson and Dorbandt had brought back six persons.

"Wire number of planes and pilots available for search. Do not spare any effort or expense. Keep me constantly posted and if there is any way in which we can be of help let me know."

VESSEL AT SEA SHAKEN BY QUAKE

Disturbance Reported Most Severe in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Cunard line today received a message from Capt. Alex Collie of the liner Caledonia, telling of a severe earth shock at sea at 8:20 p. m., yesterday, Greenwich meridian time (3:20 p. m., E. S. T.).

The message said: "44.28 north latitude, 57.04 west longitude, experienced earthquake shock causing ship violent vibrations for two minutes. No apparent damage."

This was interpreted as meaning that the Caledonia's position as given was estimated as south of the Grand Banks. She sailed at noon Saturday for Londonderry and Glasgow.

Quake Leaves New England Unharmed

No personal injuries and only small property damage resulted from the series of earth shocks yesterday along the North Atlantic seaboard from Newfoundland to the Hudson river.

Although the quake swayed Boston buildings, frightening hundreds of office workers, no serious damage was reported and building officials declared the tremors had no bad effects on foundations.

The shocks were most severe in Nova Scotia where barns collapsed, chimneys were shattered and dishes broken. Similar damage was reported in New Brunswick. Off Newfoundland, several telegraph cables were broken.

The Fundian Fault, a submarine earth strata running from the Bay of Fundy southeast under the Atlantic as far as Cape Anne was blamed for the earthquake by Prof. Kirtley Mather of Harvard, geologist.

MANY FLEE BUILDINGS

Telephone calls flowed into newspaper offices and police stations as hundreds of workers became alarmed, believing that an explosion had occurred in the vicinity of the city.

Excitement reigned in all the buildings where the tremors were felt. Upper floors of the courthouse in Pemberton sq. swayed and in many rooms the furniture was moved. The State House also shook under the shocks and Fred H. Kimball, building superintendent, received scores of telephone calls from alarmed workers.

Reports from cities throughout New England had similar experiences. At Augusta, Me., work was stopped for several minutes in the mills of the Oxford Paper Co. and the Continental Paper & Bag Mill Co., Providence, and its suburbs felt the shocks plainly.

At Lowell the earlier jolts were felt over an area of four square miles, and in many homes dishes were shaken from the tables and pictures were jarred from walls.

The disturbances were quite pronounced at Andover, Wenham, Topsfield and Middleton. At Andovers State Hospital, atop one of the tallest hills in eastern Massachusetts, there was considerable uneasiness among 1800 patients. The attending police reported that the door of a cell was even flew open. The length of the tremor in that town was estimated at three minutes.

Excitement was intense at Salem, where many residents reported they had been thrown out of chairs. North Shore Hospital patients and attendants were badly frightened. A few miles away, at Peabody, police reported no inquiries.

All Yale to Aid Hunt for Stolen Fence

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 19—A treasured relic of old Yale, a segment of the fence which bounded the old campus for nearly 50 years and which was demolished in a student fence rush in 1878, was stolen from a studio during the Yale-Princeton game.

Although this portion of the fence had in a sense been used for commercial purposes as part of the background against which Yale athletics have been photographed for 50 years, there nevertheless was much sentiment attached to it. The owners would never part with it. Whether it has been lost for good only time will tell.

Some features of its disappearance suggested to Yale men that it was a prank. The worst is feared, however. Many a Yale man has wanted that fence relic for himself, and, every reunion of old alumni, men whose college years were back in the days of the fence, tried to buy it. But it was without price.

The relic was kept with other furnishings in the studio. The thieves disturbed nothing else except to move a stool to the place the fence had occupied. On the stool was pinned by a four-inch knife blade a cartoon from a magazine. The cartoon showed two men in a second-story robbery act. At the foot of the ladder one man says to an officer stand by: "Sh! Sh! We want this to be a surprise."

The Yale News has received a telegram dated Winter Park, Fla., which reads: "Yale fence confiscated in Everglades by alligators. Do you want it?"

No reply was sent, the News staff being of opinion that the fence was not in Florida.

Because of its sentimental value the owners will ask Yale men to aid in recovery of the fence.

A. S. Blagden, Jr., of Greenwich, Ct., crew captain, was to have had his picture taken on the fence next week as did his father, crew captain in 1901.

Hold R. I. Druggist on Narcotic Charge

Providence, Nov. 19—Fifteen hundred grains of morphine and 100 grains of opium were seized today on the person of Leo Mushlin, proprietor of the Owl Drug Company, when he was arrested shortly after stepping off a train from New York, according to the police.

The druggist was arrested by Dr. H. H. Wouters, federal narcotic agent for New England, aided by Chief Police Inspector John J. Maguire of this city and other policemen. He was charged with possessing narcotics.

Aimee McPherson Sued for $324,500

Los Angeles, Nov. 19 (AP)—Cromwell Ormsby, attorney, has filed suit for $324,500 against Aimee Semple McPherson, charging the Evangelist repudiated without cause contracts he held and failed to pay him for legal services.

The complaint states that on June 3 Ormsby and the evangelist entered a contract under which he was to direct her participation in a talking picture in which she was to be the "central figure and leading star," but that the agreement was cancelled by Mrs. McPherson without cause Nov. 9.

RADIO MOVIES MADE POSSIBLE WITH NEW TUBE

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 19 (AP)—Television that may be viewed by a room full of persons or flashed on the theater screen are possibilities science hopes to make actualities with a new type of tube it has developed for the reproduction of movies by radio.

Dr. Vladimir Zworykin, television pioneer and research engineer of Westinghouse Electric Company, said that the tube, which replaces all mechanism in the reception of television, will enable more than one or two persons to watch reception at the same time.

MAKES SPECIAL TUBE.

He said he felt he was in a position to discuss the "practical possibility of flashing images on a motion picture screen so that large audiences could see television broadcasts of important events immediately after a film of them is printed."

Through the design of a special Cathode ray tube, Dr. Zworykin told the district convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers here, he had replaced such moving parts as the scanning disk and its motor in the receiver. The function of the neon or glow lamp also is taken over.

The tube he described as a kinescope. It is small at one end and large at the other. The received pictures appear upon a florescent screen in the large end of the tube.

Pictures formed by the cathode ray receiver, Dr. Zworykin said, are 4 by 5 inches in size and can be made larger and brighter by increasing voltage. The tube is attached to the receiver somewhat in the manner of a loud speaker for sound radio.

MAKES PAINT PICTURE.

When the tube is functioning a pencil of electrons, moving back and forth at terrific speed, paints a picture on the screen, giving the impression of a movie. By the use of a reflecting mirror several persons can view the picture at the same time.

One problem solved by the kinescope is that of synchronization of the receiver with the transmitter, Dr. Zworykin said. The synchronizing signal is sent with that of the picture the two are separated at the receiver and applied to the tube through different circuits.

The development when perfected, Dr. Zworykin indicated, means to the radio public a method of television simple to operate because it has no scanning disk or moving part. Such a receiver, he added, would function in silence. There would be no interference with sound broadcasting.

13 CARDINALS MAY BE NAMED IN DECEMBER

Vatican City, Nov. 19 (AP)—Pope Pius has decided to hold a secret consistory on December 16 and a public consistory on December 19. It is generally supposed he will appoint new cardinals at this time.

The recent death of Cardinal Dubois, archbishop of Paris, bringing the number of vacancies in the sacred college to 13, coupled with the approach of the season at which the Pope normally holds consistories for the elevation of new cardinals, has led to the usual speculation as to who among the prelates of the Roman Catholic Church are destined for promotion.

The Paris Archdiocese, co-extensive with the Department of the Seine, comprises some 5,000,000 potential churchgoers, mostly of Catholic upbringing.

From the standpoint of purely numerical strength it is easily the largest archdiocese in the world. The New York diocese of Patrick Cardinal Hayes might possibly surpass it in point of registered regularly church-going Catholics, though the Paris ecclesiastical authorities doubt it. At any rate, the potential Catholic community of Paris and its environs is considerably larger than that of even Rome, Milan or Naples.

There remain two other important "national" archbishoprics to be filled, that of Ireland, left vacant by the death of Cardinal O'Donnell, and that of Lisbon, Portugal, vacated by the recent demise of Cardinal Mendes Bello.

Neither of these nations has a representative in the sacred college.

With the passing of the learned benedictine, Cardinal Gasquet, last spring, England has but one wearer of the purple. In view of this summer's solemn celebration of the centenary of religious emancipation in the United Kingdom, it is considered not unlikely that an English prelate may be elevated.

Among the Italians, the names of Monsignor Lavitrano, archbishop of Palermo; Monsignor Pacelli, papal nuncio to Berlin; Monsignor Marchetti Selvaggiani, secretary of the great missionary organization for the propagation of the faith; Monsignor Tedeschini, nuncio at Madrid, and Monsignor Caccia Dominioni, papal chamberlain, are prominently mentioned.

Pope Pius has appointed Monsignor Jean Verdier of the Sulpician Order, as archbishop of Paris, succeeding the late Cardinal Dubois, but it is not known whether he will now be raised to the cardinalate.

REPORT SHOWS INFIRMARIES WELL KEPT

The indigent poor of Massachusetts are exceptionally well cared for, with no crowding generally in the 119 infirmities visited by a committee of 85 members of the woman's department. Massachusetts section of the National Civic Federation.

This was the gist of a most interesting report given by Mrs Hayward Parker Whittington, chairman of the committee which made the survey over a period of almost a year, at the 19th annual meeting of that body at the Copley-Plaza.

"Boston, with its model infirmary at Long Island, can well be proud of the care of the poor and chronic sick at that institution," Mrs. Whittington said. "About 5000 pass through this institution annually, and with a work of this magnitude a marked degree of efficiency was noted. At the time of the visit there were 1037 there, 440 in the hospital and 597 under custodial care.

"Three hundred newspapers are delivered daily. The men are given tobacco—the bill for this for one year being $2800. The inmates are not forced to work but the few who do are given $1 a day. The institution provides occupational therapy for men and women. Clothing, hooked rugs, basket making, etc. The per capita cost per patient at the hospital is $2.65 and the custodial cost per capita is $1.18," she reported.

The kindly care and efforts to make the infirmaries home-like was evident at many infirmaries, the report brought out, also the beautifully kept grounds with flower and vegetable gardens in many that are not only a source of pleasure but a source of revenue for the infirmary.

"It is encouraging to a woman's department to learn that there are twice as many men as women in the almshouses of this state," Mrs. Whittington stated. "Eliminating the Boston Infirmary on Long Island, there are 2225 men and 1110 women, a total of 3335 persons. Only 17 married couples were discovered and 44 children, not counting the boys and girls at Long Island for medical treatment."

NEARLY ALL OVER 65

The survey showed a total of 429 mentally defective, 293 crippled, 91 blind, 13 deaf and dumb, 115 chronic cases and 151 wheelchair cases. Practically all infirmary inmates were over 65 years of age. More than 200 inmates are paying whole or partial board, ranging from $3 to $8 a week—this exclusive of inmates whose board is being paid by another town having no infirmary. In the case of the Charlton Farm Association, 22 towns combine for the use of this one infirmary. At Boston there are some inmates paying from $5 to $15 per week. The committee found that separate bedrooms for the inmates is the rule with dormitories or a combination of these with bedrooms at 22 institutions visited. The visitors also found three meals of adequate quantity and quality being served in all of the infirmaries.

"We would like to urge a few more desserts or an additional sweet of some kind more frequently," Mrs. Whittington pleaded. "These old people delight in candy and sweet delicacies. One matron had a jar of cookies and doughnuts on hand all the time—the inmates' delight. A luxury fund for delicacies was at one infirmary, a milk or light lunch available between meals at another.

The committee did find, however, some infirmaries where the buildings are obsolete, plumbing inadequate or primitive, furniture and beds poor, heating poor, new floors and painting inside and out needed, and evidences of careless upkeep.

"Perhaps it is necessary to have bare floors to keep the inmates from tripping over rugs," the report says, "but very often they are scrubbed so well and so frequently that there is no paint left and without a small rug the bedroom looks unattractive."

CORRECTION

Through an error, in connection with the recent Woman's Exposition, it was stated that Mabel Adams Furniss was the founder of the Adams and Sweet Rug Cleaning Co. It was Mrs. Furniss' grandfather, Freedom S. Adams, who established the firm in 1858, and Mrs. Furniss is the present owner. Nancy Brewster is glad to make this correction.

Transforms Flowers by Radium Needle

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 19 (AP)—How a radium needle applied to a blossom has produced a new species of plant was reported to the National Academy of Sciences today by Dr. Albert F. Blakslee of Carnegie Institution.

His report is one of the first of success in a new field of plant breeding, to discover short cuts over nature in improvement of man's food plants, and methods more certain than the system of experiments by the late Luther Burbank.

The radium needle was placed in the flower of a datura plant, common name jimson weed, during its fertilization with pollen grains. The offspring showed numerous slight differences from its parent, two outstanding alterations being shape of its seed pod and in lower, flatter branches. It has since brought, that is reproduced maintaining the alterations caused by the radium.

The magic key which the radium touched was part of the reproduction cell containing chromosomes, minute, rod-shaped bodies that fix hereditary characteristics.

Dr. Blakslee exhibited models of the difference in these chromosomes before and after the radium alterations. He said these changes produced the new species.

Schoolhouse Board Still Incomplete

With Dr. Francis D. Donoghue, noted physician, announced as Mayor Nichols' choice, completion of Boston's board of commissioners of school buildings, now awaits the action of the school committee, which, at its regular meeting again deferred action on the appointment of a member to be named by the committee.

The board, as provided in the recently accepted referendum, will consists of three persons, one appointed by the mayor, another by the school committee and the third by agreement between the two, or by Governor Allen.

Recent Quakes Laid to Extinct Crater

Red Bluff, Cal., Nov. 19 (AP)—Many earthquakes recorded on the seismograph of the Mount Lassen Volcanic Observatory during the last few days presage activity of the extinct crater, R. H. Finch, volcanologist in charge of the station, said today.

The seat of the disturbances undoubtedly was at Mount Lassen, as the seismograph indicated the origin as 12 miles from the station, Finch asserted.

Germany Plans to Banish Subkoff

Emn, Prussia, Nov. 19 (AP)—A police statement today said Alexander Subkoff, husband of the late Princess Victoria, sister of the former Kaiser, was arrested last week because it was feared he would bring about unpleasant incidents in connection with the funeral. Charges of bad checks and the like were pending against him.

He was said to have expressed the intention of claiming Victoria's body as her legitimate husband and removing it.

His permanent expulsion is imminent.

Mrs. Norman Thomas Ill

New York, Nov. 19 (INS)—Mrs. Norman Thomas, wife of the defeated Socialist candidate for mayor, was today recovering from the effects of a heart attack.

SPEAKS FOR FAMILY ON IMPORTANT SUBJECT

MRS. J. M. SULLIVAN

REM unanimous choice for coughs

The first that Mrs. J. M. Sullivan of 3113 Hillcrest Ave., Cleveland, knew about REM was when her brother told her about it. It had ended a bad cough for him and he thought it would do as much for her. It did. And it went even further. As Mrs. Sullivan herself puts it: "My mother, father, husband and myself all get coughs at times during the winter, but the bottle of REM we keep in the house always relieves us and we wouldn't be without it." Simple coughs usually yield to a single bottle, and that is why REM is so economical, despite the fact that it contains a special ingredient too costly for ordinary cough syrups. If REM doesn't relieve you promptly, your druggist is authorized to return your money. What could be fairer than that?

JAILER SHOT BY 'SANTA CLAUS' BANK ROBBER

Eastland, Tex., Nov. 19 (AP)—Public feeling ran high today against Marshall Ratliff, who led a sanguinary bank robbery in the full regalia of a Santa Claus, as a result of an attempt of the condemned man to escape from the county all.

Deputy Sheriff Tom Jones was critically wounded and Ratliff severely beaten in hand-to-hand struggle on a narrow flight of stairs in the jail.

Ratliff, whose use of a Santa Claus costume as a disguise in the Christmas time robbery of a Cisco, Tex., bank, in 1927, made it one of the most spectacular in Texas history, has been sentenced to death, but was returned here recently from the state penitentiary for a sanity hearing.

He had simulated paralysis and all authorities were convinced he could not move. Early today, while feeding other prisoners, Jones and E. P. Gilbert, jailer, left the door to Ratliff's cell open. The prisoner slipped out and obtained Jones' gun from the jail office. Jones followed and they met on a narrow stairway. Jones went down with bullets in his abdomen, above his heart and through his knee.

Gilbert, hearing the firing, rushed down the stairs. Ratliff fired twice but missed, and was slugged with the butt of the gun, wrested from him by the jailer.

Tennis Star Weds Son of Minister

London, Nov. 19 (AP)—Eileen Bennett, noted English tennis star, and Edmund Fearnley Whittingstall, a painter, son of the Rev. O. F. Whittingstall of Chalfont St. Giles, Buckminster, were married at St. Margaret's, Westminster, today.

COLONEL MAPLE ENTICED INTO CLOSED CARRIAGE

We continue our book review of "Palaces of Sin," the amazing expose of high society by Col. Dick Maple of Indiana, written in 1900:

WHERE had Clara Middle gone? Find out I must. I was not left in ignorance long, as a carriage halted in front of my hotel one brisk, chilly morning and a "flunkey" brought up a card which said that Mrs. Bigmout would be pleased to speak to Col. Maple.

I "puckered" myself up, like a fool, and rushed down to see what the dear "old thing" wanted. She informed me that she had stopped that "very delightful mawn-ing" to take me for a ride. I accepted the invitation and crawled in beside her, and, reader, it was disgusting the way she had perfume all over her "harness" as it was a closed carriage. We had not gone far until she turned to me and said, "My dear Colonel." Bear in mind, reader, that she knew I had inherited my aunt's money. Before I realized it, she—

"Sausage and Cakes"

The favorite cold-weather breakfast in thousands of American homes. Daintily packed farm sausage—the kind that makes buckwheat cakes worth while—is now arriving "fresh daily." This is the caution we one of the best brands: "Take the sausage out of the box and put on plate loosely, direct on ice, if not used immediately."

Of course this means that Boston ice is the ice to use because its purity matches the purity of the food it protects. Made from scientifically purified and filtered drinking water—frozen in sanitary containers.

GIRL ARRESTED IN MOONSHINE WAR KILLINGS

Texarkana, Ark., Nov. 19 (AP)—Acting on the theory that two brothers whose shot-riddled bodies were found in an abandoned well, were victims of a moonshiners' war, authorities today had in custody a convicted prohibition law violator and a 20-year-old girl.

Foos Coe, 35, who recently served a sentence and now is under a new indictment on liquor charges, and his girl friend, Ola Owens, were being questioned regarding the deaths of Arthur Matson, 24, and Lee Matson, 18.

The youths left home with premonitions of trouble, members of their family said, and a search had been conducted for them for some time. Their bodies were found by their mother, two sisters and an uncle.

Sheriff Magee said he believed the brothers had been taken into the woods, summarily executed, and their bodies carried in a truck to the well.

The sheriff said he thought the brothers had been operating a still and in this way had incurred the enmity of other moonshiners.

"They left home armed with shotguns," Pearl Matson, the youths' sister, said, "and told us they were going squirrel hunting."

"If we aren't back by night," she quoted one of them as saying, "hunt for us, and if we aren't back by morning be sure to hunt for us."

Air Kidnaping Wins Divorce for Woman

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 19—Swooping down from the sky, Basil L. Ferguson wrote new aviation history when he staged the first aerial kidnaping on record, according to the story his estranged wife, Mrs. Virginia Ferguson, told Superior Judge Owen in court here.

According to the wife, Ferguson brought his plane to a spectacular landing in a vacant field adjoining the yard in which their five-year-old son, Gene, was at play, seized the child and soared away into the skies.

The aerial kidnaping occurred in a nearby town and Ferguson flew with the boy to Los Angeles. The wife avers for many hours she sought to locate the youngster, and when she finally did so, the father returned him to her without protest.

According to the story which won Mrs. Ferguson a divorce, the father had made previous attempts to gain possession of the child in more orthodox fashion, but without success.

Prejudice Thrives Where Ignorance Hives!

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE beckons all to cultivate knowledge. Tyranny, intolerance and poverty wither as schools grow in this great land of opportunity.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

Letters From Our Readers

Robt. C. Vose in Praise of Art Page.

Editor Boston American:

I wish to congratulate you on your very interesting and illuminating page in the American of November 10, under the heading "Paintings by Insane Patients Like Modernist Art."

This splendid, illustrated article is very timely, for not only are there many so-called artists, but there are a number of institutions which admit so-called works of art, which, through their vulgarity, morbid ugliness, false and screaming color, and absolute lack of any knowledge or ability to produce worthwhile art, belong only in caricature shows.

For 30 years I have daily been associated with art, artists and connoisseurs, and from this experience, feel qualified to express the opinion that the raison d'etre of art is to elevate and refine our natures, please and soothe our minds and beautifully decorate our homes.

No one would accuse "Modernistic" art of doing any of these things. Your article is enlightening! Congratulations!

Very truly yours,
ROBERT C. VOSE.

Hits Failure to Save Car Owners

Editor Boston American:

I am writing this in the hope that you will publish it and by the power of your newspaper help to correct an unnecessary wrong.

The State of Massachusetts compels everyone to take public liability insurance when they get their automobile plates.

This is as it should be, but they don't advise one what company one should insure in, which they should do, because when a company fails, the policy holders are notified that they must take out new insurance although they have paid a full year's premium.

I have had several clients who had to do this when the Car Owners failed and again when the Bristol failed.

Now the insurance commissioner should have known that things were not all right with this company several months ago, why did he not notify the people then instead of waiting till the company went under.

The right thing to have done, in my opinion, would have been to stop the insurance company from doing business long before he did, and return the unearned premium to the policy-holders and then notify them to get new insurance or let the new insuring company get their premium from the defunct company.

The commissioner could hold out the unearned premium to pay those companies assuming the risk.

As it is now it is very unfair to say the least.

I would like to see an editorial on this. W. B. F.

Boy Teaches Dog's Master a Lesson

Editor Boston American:

I saw something the other day on a street in the West End that is worthy of repeating.

A dog held on leash dropped a bone. The animal strained to reach it, but its owner tugged and drew the dog away.

Farther on, the man stopped, to chat with a friend, holding the dog tight by the chain. A little boy playing nearby saw the incident and, noticing the dog while his master was absorbed in conversation, went up slyly and replaced the dropped bone in the mouth of the animal.

Probably the dog was hungry, thought this boy. He may have known what hunger is. He could not help but respond. It is a little matter, but it has a big lesson behind it. J. R. B.

Sees Heroism in Scrubbing Floors

Editor Boston American:

I cannot agree with that speaker in the interests of the Tercentenary of Boston, who claimed that modern heroes cannot compare with the heroes of 300 years ago, in our early Colonial history.

Not long ago I found a very pleasant woman scrubbing the floor in a large building on Tremont st. I was impressed with her manner of conversation.

It developed that she had been once wealthy, but conditions changed with her, as they do with many of us. She said she could scrub and she did scrub. She scrubbed with joy. Her face was bright and her hands were willing.

I don't have to look for heroes in the past. They are right around us in scrub women of Boston.

Praises Goodwin for Tunnel Stand

Editor Boston American:

Chairman Frank A. Goodwin of the finance commission is certainly fair in his plea that the plans submitted for the building of the East Boston vehicular tunnel should have the consideration of the public for approval or disapproval.

Why? Taxpayers pay these bills. They should have something to say. This is plain business. Contributors to any fund should have something to say about how that fund should be spent.

JUSTICE, NOT MERCY.

Happy After Visit to Malden Shrine

Editor Boston American:

Isn't it wonderful, the shrine at Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden. So many people are being helped. Probably some will never be permanently cured, but I know from one case that it has been greatly benefited by this pilgrimage.

It is great to see so many persons waiting for a cure. Then there is an educational value about it. It is directing many thoughts into the channel whereby they can be helped. I could not resist writing this letter, because I have had many happy thoughts after being at this shrine.

Bay State Autoists Are Punished

Concord, N. H., Nov. 19—The names of five Massachusetts automobile drivers were on lists of revocations and suspensions of driving permits in this state, announced by John F. Griffin, state motor vehicle commissioner.

The right to operate a machine in New Hampshire was taken away from Charles Rocray of Arlington, for reckless operation. Suspensions of the right to operate a machine in New Hampshire were meted out to Melvin B. Squires of Brookline, for figuring in a fatal accident; Alfred J. Michaud of Amesbury, figuring in an accident; Alphonse Comeau of Revere, for operating with improper brakes, and Matthew Kirpatrick of Natick, for improper operation.

It is better! Taste it and see GULDEN'S Mustard

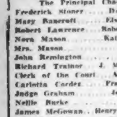
By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE good things of the drama, it seems, just carry on from year to year. And so it was easy last night to recognize in "Scarlet Pages," at the Plymouth, a number of telling twists in plot and situation that suggested "The Trial of Mary Dugan" at one moment and "Madame X" at the next. To be exact, there was a good deal of each, with Elsie Ferguson adding further novelty by turning herself into a modern Portia of the criminal courts.

* * *

MISS FERGUSON should be willing to express a word of gratitude to her twin authors, Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer, for they have ingeniously contrived for her first class situations fairly rich in the talents of a woman so richly blended in the arts of the theater. It was plain, case-hardened drama, and if the recognition of the first-night audience may be lodged as relevant



Nicholas Young

Miss Ferguson made everyone feel the tension. While we have but slight acquaintance with lady trial lawyers, "Scarlet Pages" made it quite clear why prosecuting attorneys might regard them with professional horror.

* * *

DEFENDING a young night club entertainer charged with the murder of her father, Miss Ferguson had every opportunity to run through her entire list of carefully trained emotions. Her appeal to the jury was almost personal, for the audience was left in the predicament of being seated where the jury ought to be; she fought and haggled with the witness-baiting district attorney, and by all the tricks of the profession she badgered the prosecution until it groaned in its own misery. Miss Ferguson, for a spell, was having a very exhilarating time.

* * *

OF course, is such matters as these surprises may be expected. And it came in staggering fashion as the coup by which the young prisoner was acquitted. You might just as readily have suspected the jury of a plot of being an accessory in the scandal.

* * *

EFFICIENT support made Miss Ferguson's task, if not lighter, certainly more telling. Lee Baker's performance as the prosecuting attorney could not be improved upon, while Robert Williams, as he has done many times before, gave ample proof that all the talented young juveniles not heard from are busy in the cinema. The girl in the case was admirably played by Kathryn March.

* * *

Yankees' Pitching Ace on Stage at Old Howard

The sporting world will look to the Old Howard this week, where Waite Hoyt, pitcher of the New York Yankees, is appearing. Mr. Hoyt's vaudeville offering combines singing with a story of his career as a ball player.

The burlesque part of the program is presented by the Mutual "Frivolities," a company alive to the ideals of safe and sane burlesque. It served to introduce the dancing girl, Adelaide, a specialty was one of the best ever presented in this house. The film bill Tim McCoy in "The Overland Telegraph," a Western thriller, is the feature.

TAMING OF JOAN CRAWFORD IS CUE IN STATE PHOTOPLAY

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

AFTER the taming comes "The Untamed." Last week, at Loew's State, it was "The Taming of the Shrew," anciently costumed. This week it is the taming of no less a peppy hoyden than Joan Crawford, very modernishly garbed. This young star, who should be graduated from jazz age roles, appears in her first full-length talkie. She always looks good, pictorially and sartorially. All her fans will like her in her latest film.

* * *

IT doesn't follow that the photoplay is a world-beater. It has its good points and its weak spots. The chief flaws occur in the dialogue and in the slaughter by Hollywood of Charles E. Scoggins' very classy tale of an untamed lassie growing up in the South American jungle. But the studio lion tamers have committed several major operations on the red-blooded story. Mr. Scoggins would never recognize this fiction baby as his own. He is far away just now; we had a letter from him, dated at a village in Granada, Spain. So that probably he will not see and hear this changeling of his until it is long past the time to enter protest. We regret the radical scissorings, the total elimination of the manly hero of the original narrative, and the done-over role of the heroine. Our regret is due chiefly to our belief that this heroine, as she was, would have given Miss Crawford the chance of a lifetime. And she would have done it well, doubtless.

Joan Crawford

* * *

THE picture gets a good start. These early sequences are the only ones that have followed the Scoggins script. They are the best. Hollywood sees the greater appeal to theater-goers in what follows, the story of that lass plunged into the social atmosphere of an American metropolis. Thus, "Untamed" follows in the line of "Modern Maidens" and others of that ilk.

* * *

IT ought to be good box office stuff. The audience yesterday applauded, and laughed, and seemed to enjoy it. The younger folks seemed to dote on it. Miss Crawford sings and her voice is satisfactory. She dances better. Robert Montgomery is a fair hero; but we are forced to think what an opportunity the heroic prototype as Scoggins outlined it, would have given this young actor. Ernest Torrence is the outstanding figure, dramatically, next to him, Holmes Herbert and John Mijan.

* * *

ON stage, the State has an excellent show. The feature is "Variety Land," a peppy revue featuring a number of clever folk. Mr. Miller and his Statesmans play pleasingly.

HIGH POWERED MELODRAMA IN MAKING

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 19—"Temple Power," a sa(ical melodrama, will have all its satire, to say nothing of its "mellerdrammer," left intact if Llewellyn Hughes is given his way. Mr. Hughes was brought from the East to write "The Sky Hawk," and his performance merited another job, so he has been turned loose on "Temple Tower," written by H. O. McNeile, who also authored "Bull Dog Drummond."

Louella O. Parsons.

This "Temple Tower" will endeavor to rival "Bull Dog Drummond," hence the importance of getting the last bit the exquisite Churchill, who at the tender age of 18, has six leads to her credit, will have the feminine lead, and John Garrick, who played here last spring in "The Wizard Well," will be the principal male attraction in the tale. Donald Gallaher, erstwhile stage juvenile, will direct.

* * *

MARY NOLAN, who has had to stop work because of an offending appendix every few weeks, can now return to Universal assured that she will no longer have similar trouble. She had her appendix removed and as soon as she gets back she will begin work on "Carnival," which Junior Laemmle is planning to produce on a scale befitting the story. John Robertson has been signed again to direct. Looks as if John is at Universal for keeps. He has done very well directing the erstwhile Imogene Wilson too. James Murray will probably play opposite Miss Nolan.

DOLORES DEL RIO, hair slicked back and bare-headed, arrived at the Roosevelt Hotel for luncheon the other day. She was accompanied by Roland Drew and both of them seemed to have plenty to say to each other. Roland, you will remember, has been much interested in the Mexican beauty for these many months. They tell me all United Artists that Rosarita Del Rio is being given an entirely new characterization in "The Red Dove," which George Fitzmaurice is directing. The part is so different from Evangeline and other sweet, sobby roles that they had a consultation at United Artists whether to call it "The Red One" or "Sailor's Sweetheart." Edmund Lowe is the sailor and he is playing the same type of role he played in "The Cock-Eyed World."

I AM not blase enough to get a thrill out of having some one talk to London on my telephone. Evelyn Brent was at my house when a phone call came through to her from her husband, Harry Edwards. Harry turned right around and went back to England after he and Evelyn returned from London because he had not completely finished his business. He will only stay in London five days, returning to Hollywood as quickly as possible. "The awful part," said Mrs. Edwards, "was that we had to be separated on our first wedding anniversary." Well, from snatches of conversation I heard these two will be together for many, many other anniversaries.

Harry Steppe and Show Furnish Fun at Gayety

Harry Steppe and "His Own Show," featuring the popular Hebrew comedian and two co-stars, Bud and Betty Abbott, is the current show at the Gayety, Boston's uptown burlesque theater.

"Monte Carlo" and "The Fortune Hunter" are two of the big scenes, and in them Mr. Steppe turns loose all the comedy in his possession. It is a rip-roaring comedy all the way. But the singing and dancing part of the show cannot be overlooked despite the preponderance of fun. Frances Knight dances and sings in her own intriguing way, and Holub's Gayety Symphonic orchestra adds its bit to the entertainment.

Evidence of Mother Love

FREDDIE BURKE FREDERICK AND PAULINE FREDERICK

ALTHOUGH Freddie and Pauline are both Fredericks, they are not related. Freddie plays the son of Pauline in "Evidence," coming to the Metropolitan Thursday. 'Tis a tale of a woman's suffering in a net of circumstantial evidence.

COLLEGE FILM AT ORPHEUM PEPFUL

"SO THIS IS COLLEGE," a picturization of campus life, enlivened by catchy tunes and snappy dialogue, and presented by a youthful cast, is the film feature at Loew's Orpheum this week. Briefly, the story concerns two college chums, pals in everything until Babs, the new college vamp, breaks their friendship and the fun starts. For football thrills and real "collegiate" atmosphere, this talking picture ranks among the best of its kind. Robert Montgomery, Elliott Nugent, Sally Starr, Phyllis Crane and "Ukelele Ike" are seen in the principal roles.

Sally Starr

The always amusing Sid Lewis, billed as the "Clown Prince of Vaudeville," makes a decided hit in the headline stage spot. Sid offers a hilarious 15 minutes of songs and chatter. Lester Lane, Paul Tisen and Ethel Osborne appear in an entertaining singing, dancing and musical act, in which Paul Tisen's Orchestra occupies an important place. Other vaudeville favorites are the Hamilton Sisters and Fordyce, Paddy Cliff and Syd Reis, and the Eddy duo.

FILM EXTRAS PREFER HOME

THE average Hollywood extra girl would rather marry a good-looking electrician and settle down to a home that included an auto, a radio and babies, than see her named spelled out in electric lights as the star of any super-special motion picture.

Bebe Daniels

The "mammy" singer is right and home and a hubby means more than a Rolls Royce at the Studio gate, if the response to a questionnaire given 100 chorus girls on the Radio Pictures lot is any guide. The girls were members of the stock chorus assembled on the RKO lot for "Rio Rita," now at Keith's and in which Bebe Daniels is starred.

The questionnaire revealed that of the 100—

Ninety-four are unmarried, 85 prefer marriage to a career, and seven have no desire to marry millionaires.

Two are studying law.

Eight receive remittances from home, three live with their families in Hollywood.

Two are from wealthy families, 22 have had stage experience, 56 have had movie experience.

Eight are expert swimmers.

Thirty-six have trained as dancers, 12 are taking vocal lessons. Nine have been on the stage.

ENRIGHT WILL NAME 'SLAYER' OF ROTHSTEIN

Paris, Nov. 19 (INS)—Reiterating his assertion that he knows who killed Arnold Rothstein, New York gambler, Richard E. Enright, former New York city police commissioner, added the information today that he may soon voluntarily reveal the name of the slayer and show proof of his contention.

In an exclusive interview here today, the former New York police head ridiculed the placing on trial of George A. McManus on charges of murdering the underworld leader.

Enright recently arrived here for a brief vacation following his defeat as an independent candidate in the recent mayoralty elections in New York. During his campaign he repeatedly asserted he knew the name of Rothstein's slayer, and charged in addition that the murderer's identity was common knowledge in New York political circles.

"The district attorney in New York thinks McManus is guilty, but just let him try to convict him," said Enright. "I am convinced he will be acquitted.

"But regardless of the outcome of the trial, I may eventually decide to give the name of the actual slayer and furnish proof that my accusation is correct.

"In any cases, however, I shall not make this revelation until after the trial of McManus is over."

PROBE FRAUD IN DETROIT VOTE

Detroit, Nov. 19 (AP)—The city election commission was called for a special meeting today to consider charges of fraud in connection with the municipal election November 5 which are expected to be filed by Charles P. O'Neil, attorney for John W. Smith, whom Charles Bowles defeated for mayor.

Richard W. Reading, city clerk who summoned the commissioners is understood to have been informed by "mith supporters that cases of fraud have been checked in eight precincts and that in every precinct fraud is alleged to have been committed.

Smith supporters charge that "dummy" voters participated in the election by using cards designating new locations of polling places which Reading mailed to qualified voters.

GIRL BATTLES A KIDNAPER

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—Miss Margaret Carlin, a stenographer, was kidnaped by a man in a chauffeured motor car, but fought so fiercely her abductor threw her from the machine.

Her kidnaper, she said, was a middle-aged man wearing goggles, who demanded to know the address of John Buil, her fiance. He said he wanted to kill Buil.

The young woman was picked up hysterical from the street and taken to a hospital. She said she did not know the man who kidnaped her, but that he protested his love for her and swore death to her fiance.

U. S. Expenditures Show Decrease

Washington, Nov. 19—Despite increased spending by governmental departments for the first four months of the current fiscal year, total government expenditures for the period showed a decrease of $114,168,963, as compared with the previous year, due to the smaller public debt payments.

The monthly statement of the Treasury showed total expenditures out of ordinary funds for July, August, September and October aggregated $1,324,269,560, as compared with $1,438,466,523 a year ago.

Drives Burning Auto to the Fire Station

Concord, N. H., Nov. 19—E. C. Higgins of this city arose early for a good start on an automobile trip. Before he got going he found the upholstery in his sedan to be on fire. Instead of parking the machine and calling the fire department, he drove the flaming car to the fire station and rang the front door bell to obtain help. The firemen gave him an unanimous vote of thanks.

Loses $500,000, but Keeps Gems

New York, Nov. 19—Mrs. Charlotte King Palmer, who owns one of the finest collections of jewels in the world, said on her arrival from Paris on the Leviathan that she had lost "more than $500,000 in the stock market here."

This loss did not jeopardize her gems, however, she said, and she displayed her fingers and arms, heavily laden with rings and bracelets, for proof.

Two Are Killed in Plane Crash

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 19—Flying Cadets Justin M. Russell, 27, and George S. Coffey, 23, members of the observation section, Kelly Field, were killed when the plane in which they were flying crashed near the edge of a field 11 miles north of Boerne, near here.

Russell was dead when nearby farmers reached the demolished plane. Coffey, pilot, died 10 minutes later.

Navy Ship Power Aid Refused 2 Cities

Washington, Nov. 19 (AP)—A request by the cities of Seattle and Tacoma for use of the aircraft carrier Lexington as an emergency power plant to alleviate a shortage of electricity, has been refused by the Navy.

The Navy said many considerations made it impractical for it to grant the unusual request that the powerful generators of the ship be used for this purpose.

The Lexington, one of the largest war vessels afloat, has generators capable of producing 212,000 horsepower which could be linked to the Tacoma power lines for distribution in the two cities.

Officials said they expected the ship would be ordered to sea today or tomorrow. They did not detail their objections to such use of the craft.

Fair Tonight and Slightly Colder

Fair and slightly colder weather tonight and Wednesday is the official forecast for Boston and vicinity). Today the storm which visited this city yesterday is centered over Canada north of Montreal.

Light rains and snows are falling in some places in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia and from there northeastward into Canada, but the weather is generally clear east of the mountains northward as far as Portland, Me. Light rain and snow flurries are expected in Vermont and eastern New York tonight.

Seize Estates of Ex-Mongol Princes

Urlaa, Bator, Mongolia, Nov. 19 (AP)—More than a thousand households, valued at 8,000,000 rubles (about $1,000,000), belonging to former Mongolian princes and noblemen, were confiscated today by the government and apportioned among the collective farms operated by peasants.

Each prince who yielded his house, cattle and other property without a struggle was permitted to retain 3000 rubles worth of property, while those who were accused of trying to conceal their assets from the government were left only 300 rubles.

Wounded Boy Dies

Hampden, Nov. 19—Valentine Bandowski, 14, accidentally shot through the neck by a bullet from a small caliber rifle in the hands of a companion, Antonio Baranti, while the two were playfully struggling last Wednesday, died today in a Springfield hospital of his injuries.

30 STUDENTS FLY DAILY AT AIRPORT

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

The question of how much flying is being done at the Boston Airport by the commercial operators is best answered by the fact that the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service has a night crew of five mechanics, who labor from 4 o'clock in the afternoon to midnight, getting the ships ready for the line for the next day's flying.

As is the case in the reserve of Harry Depew Copland, operations manager for the company at the airport, the crew chief of these night-hogs, as they are called, is Paul Battilana, a mechanic of the first rank. Paul was down at the Vineyard flying school all summer as chief mechanic, and Harry Copland liked his work so well that the appointment of Battilana for chief of maintenance of the night staff was merely a matter of telling Paul the story.

While it may appear at a waste of time, money and effort to some people to keep a crew of five men working after all the ships are put to bed for the night, the consideration of the amount of time flown by the students each day dispels every sign of doubt.

With 30 or more active students flying the ships an average of 30 minutes apiece each morning, and then the non-resident students taking a crack at them during the afternoon, the line crew, under O. C. Ernoon, the line crew, under O. C. "Oscar" Leonard, could not hope to take care of the many little things that crop up during the day's activities, but which do not hinder the operation of the planes.

So that is where Battilana and his men come into the picture, and the quintet may be seen every night in the week laboring like beavers to get the busses ready for 8 o'clock the next day.

When asked how he liked his new job, Paul shrugged his shoulders and remarked: "My job is keeping airplanes in the air, and it doesn't make any difference if I work on them during the daylight hours or at night. It's all in the game, anyhow."

With an outlook like that on his job, the chances of Curtiss-Wright's airplanes being ready for the line every morning are very good.

APTE BACK IN FOLD

With the latter part of the summer spent in the mountains of New Hampshire with an OX-5 motored Waco, Wylie Apte, former Boston flier, returned to the fold, richer in everything, including health.

Apte stated that he flew the Waco until both the ship and he were dizzy, and when he put the bus away in Fabian for the winter, the OX was still turning up 1400 revs on the ground. Ask anybody what that means after over a hundred hours on said motor without a top overhaul.

When the first sign of spring rolls around, Wylie will return to the mountains, set the ship up, wind up the motor, hop right in for a few repairs and a paint job, and then go back for a busy summer.

Among other things, this chap who was the last of the boys to leave that part of the country, and it took a whale of a snowstorm to drive him out, plans to fly a Day-Standard during the coming summer, powered, no doubt with a 300 Wright Whirlwind. He will use the Waco for student instruction only, and the Standard will haul four passengers at a time from early morn till darkness falls.

BURTON MARRIES

The way these boys at the Hub airport are getting married is a caution and the rest of the gang sits back and wonders who is going to be next. Latest in the list of Benedicts is Bill Burton, of Winthrop, mechanic for Curtiss, who, last Saturday, married Miss Betty Hosmer, of Somerville.

Not a single word of the forthcoming marriage was divulged by Bill, and the secret leaked out only when he sent cards to the boys telling them of his latest step-off.

The entire airport gathered around Bill and offered congratulations and wishes of happiness, and Bill beamed his thanks.

Without a single Ireland boat to keep his mind off the days of the former glory of his "Navy," "Shorty" Corcoran spent most of the miserable day down at the wharf, wondering if said wharf would break its moorings, and join the missing "Fish Ball," his trustworthy row boat which has been stolen, or wandered away A. W. O. L.

Corcoran expects to be transferred shortly to Rockland, Me., where Bill Wincipaw holds the fort in Curtiss' famous seaplane base. If "Shorty" goes up there, he will have charge of all maintenance of the seaplanes, and will be entirely in his glory.

Record High Tide Lashes Winthrop Shore and Inundates Boston's Waterfront

With a rise of 13 feet 6 inches, a record tide, driven four feet beyond its normal height by a easterly storm, caused considerable damage at Winthrop and other points in Boston harbor. Photo shows the sea wall at Winthrop being lashed. It was one of the best spray displays Winthrop folk have seen.

1,655,000 NOW RULE RUSSIA

Moscow, Nov. 19 (AP)—Official figures issued today gave the present membership of the Communist party which rules Russia as 1,655,000 members.

Factory workers comprise 44 per cent, peasants 21 per cent and employes and others of various categories, 35 per cent.

In 1917, shortly before the October revolution, the Bolshevik section of the Russian democratic party, the forerunner of the Communist party, numbered only 115,000, of whom 65,000 were workers and 17,000 peasants.

Total membership of the present Communist party was reduced greatly by a recent "purging" process which eliminated more than 200,000 Communists who were found wanting in some respects.

Wife's Deposition May Save Slayer

London, Nov. 19 (AP)—A wife's deathbed deposition today is before the judicial committee of the privy council in a supreme effort to save Dr. Benjamin Knowles from life imprisonment for her murder.

Dr. Knowles and his wife, Madge Clifton Knowles, a former music hall artist, lived happily, he protests, in a lonely bungalow in the Hill station of Ashanti on the gold coast of Africa. Mrs. Knowles was shot in the leg and died of the wound. Dr. Knowles was tried before the supreme court of Kumasi, was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. The wife's dying deposition was that she accidentally shot herself.

Install New Chicago University Head, 30

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP) — Robert Maynard Hutchins became today, at the age of 30, the fifth president of the University of Chicago.

Inauguration of this tall, almost boyish young man was made brilliant by the attendance of representatives from 300 colleges and universities not only in the United States but in Canada and Europe as well. One hundred and twenty-five of them were presidents of the schools they represented.

Seven came from the largest and proudest schools of higher learning in the world, but none was among them so proud as William J. Hutchins, president of Beres college, Ky., for it was his son who was being honored.

AUCTION BRIDGE
by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

While the distribution of this deal is freakish, the bidding is normal. The game bid is reached at both Auction and Contract and while, as will be seen in the play a Grand Slam is made on the hand, it is not only not biddable but will be defeated if bid.

Salient Points of Bidding

Auction Bidding: The first round of bidding is conventional and requires no special comment. Failing an assist from partner, West on the second round shows the two suited nature of his hand by bidding three Clubs, which North doubles.

East takes out to three Spades following the double, far better able to support Spades than Clubs and figuring that this contract cannot be defeated more than one trick in view of the apparently strong two suiter shown by his partner. As an actual matter of fact, East-West are down exactly one should North double instead of bidding four Hearts.

Contract Bidding: North makes a forcing overcall at Contract by bidding three Clubs over partner's one Heart and West's one Spade. With his holding he could well bid for game in Hearts at once but chooses the forcing overcall to demand a response from partner on the chance that, should South hold the Ace of Spades or none of that suit, there may be a Slam in the hand.

As the cards lie, there is little point in the three Club bid, as the fesses, in a lonely bungalow in the Hill station of Ashanti on the gold coast of Africa. Mrs. Knowles was shot in the leg and died of the wound. Dr. Knowles was tried before the supreme court of Kumasi, was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. The wife's dying deposition was that she accidentally shot herself.

The play of this deal, the Declarer effects a Grand Coup, that is, shortens his own trump holding to equal in number the trumps held by the player on his right and thereafter, by leading from Dummy through the adverse trumps, makes the remaining trump tricks, whereas had he been forced to lead from his own hand a trump trick would be lost. In the situation here, the Grand Coup, comes about naturally on a cross ruff.

West leads initially the Queen of Clubs, won by King in Dummy. Declarer now leads trumps, going up with his Ace and reserving a possible finesse for the second round of the suit if necessary. South leads a Diamond, winning with the Ace, follows with the King of Diamonds, and next the Ace of Clubs upon which he discards one of his Spades. He now leads the 3 of Hearts from Dummy, East plays the 7, and South wins with the 9, West having shown out of Hearts on the first round.

Declarer now lays down his good Queen and Jack of Diamonds, discarding thereon the two small Spades in Dummy, and next trumps one of his own small Spades with Dummy's Heart 6. South now holds the following: Spade 2 Heart K J 4, East holds: Spade K. J.; Heart Q. 10.

It will be seen that South, to make the balance of the tricks need but to lead a Club from Dummy, trumping with the four of Hearts, then return his last Spade to be trumped by Dummy's remaining Heart and thereafter lead a Club through East's Queen-10 of Hearts. Thus a natural Grand Coup is brought about.

It is of interest to note that a Slam though made as outlined above, would have been defeated if bid; for, against a Slam contract, West would lay down his Ace of Spades for the first trick and follow with another Spade, thus stopping even six odd. Against a lower bid, however, West's correct opening lead is the Queen of Clubs.

RETURNS LOOT OF $385,000

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—The morning papers said today that James Murray, former West Side politician now serving a 25-year sentence in Atlanta federal penitentiary, had turned over to the Government $385,000 in negotiable bonds, representing his share in the loot of the $2,000,000 Rondout mail robbery in Chicago, June 12, 1924.

Return of the bonds was in connection with the filing at Washington of an application for commutation of sentence.

With Murray's share returned, there remains only about $14,090 uncovered. That sum is believed to have been taken by William J. Fahy, who was convicted with Murray and who is also serving a 25-year prison sentence. Fahy, who was regarded as the ace of sleuths in the postal inspection service, was called the master plotter of the robbery, although he took no actual part in it.

United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson said the settlement was made by Murray last spring, the transaction being handled at Washington by Grant Miller, chief postal inspector.

CALLS PEACE BY DISARMAMENT ONLY A MYTH

Security through disarmament was branded as a "myth" by Rear Admiral Charles L. Hussey, U. S. N., (retired), in the first of a series of debates at the Boston City Club.

A small, international police force, on the other hand, was advocated by Willis J. Abbot contributing editor of the Christian Science Monitor, opposing Hussey in debate.

Hussey, following up his "myth" claim, added that security was more obtainable through armaments and the ability of a nation to protect its interests at all times.

"Armament does not cause wars," Hussey said, "it is the conflict of policies of nations that is responsible."

The admiral pointed out the situation between the United States and Canada to bear out the last contention, saying there was no conflict in policies between the two countries.

He said people were not yet willing to trust themselves to treaties as their security and called this the principle stumbling block to the disarmament moves that started after the World War. This movement, he said, had not advanced as was expected by its originators.

"Peace will only exist through ceaseless endeavor," he told his audience, adding that the war lesson confronts nations at all times.

"The problem of security must be solved before we tackle disarmament," he contended.

Abbott claimed that armament does not and cannot end wars, citing the World War as an example of the clash of the greatest armaments in history. He charged that when a nation attained a strong position, from the viewpoint of armament, other nations felt obliged to equal it, and the result was a wild naval race.

He blamed a race such as this between England and Germany, as a big factor in bringing on the World War.

No wonder this MASS. Mother is proud

"MY little son, Roland, was ill, troubled a lot with constipation," says Mrs. Ethel Jenkins, 31 So. Huntington Avenue, Boston. "He got very weak, run-down and unthrifty weight. I gave him California Fig Syrup; and in just a little while he was eating heartily and gaining. Now I'm proud as can be; he's so robust, bright and active."

Temporary relief should be far from the first consideration when a child shows by bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness, or a listless, weak condition, that he's constipated. Of course, the child's system needs a prompt cleansing. But the youngster's bowels also need toning and strengthening.

That's where California Fig Syrup does its best work. It helps strengthen the bowel muscles; gives tone to a weak stomach. That's why faulty digestion improves with its use; bowel movements become regular and remain so.

Every child loves its flavor; its cleansing action is prompt but gentle. A pure vegetable product; no danger of causing the laxative habit. It has full medical endorsement.

There are many imitations; but the word California marks the genuine.

Miss Kathleen Chase Makes Bow Tonight; New York Bud Is Feted at Tea

Miss Barbara Frost Attends Debut of New York Friend

BECOMINGLY GOWNED IN black lace, Miss Elizabeth Coolidge of Fairfield st. introduced Miss Elizabeth Boardman, a New York debutante, at a tea at the Chilton Club this afternoon. Miss Boardman is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Boardman of Quarry Top, Riverdale-on-Hudson, N. Y. Her mother entertained for her at a luncheon in Boston at the Women's Republican Club on November 5, to which affair about forty debs were invited. She is a provisional member of the New York Junior League. Miss Elizabeth Coolidge supervised the pourers at today's reception and those at the tables included Miss Rachel Coolidge, Miss Mary Chase, Miss Edith Gray, Miss Ethel Grew, Miss Leslie Grinnell, Miss Elizabeth Hamlin, Miss Mary Potter, Miss Hope Richardson, Miss Rachel Warner and Miss Dorothea Newman.

A HOUSE-DANCE IS BEING given this evening in honor of Miss Kathleen Chase, daughter of Mrs. Stephen Chase, at their Fairfield st. residence. Miss Chase will look charming in a frock of white moire with which she will carry white roses. A dinner for 12 is to precede the dance. It will be attended by the ushers, who are to be in charge of Theodore Chase, a twin brother of the new debutante. In this group will be William Nickerson, Lentner Sewall, Alexander Wadsworth, Frederey Bertolet and Ransom Hodges.

MISS MARY IRWIN HOWELL of New York has as her house guest Miss Barbara P. Frost, daughter of the George Frosts of Chestnut Hill. Miss Howell is being formally presented today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin W. Howell. She in turn will visit Miss Frost at the time of the Boston girl's "coming out" on December 20, this to take the form of a dance at the Copley-Plaza. The two girls were classmates at Miss Wright's School in Bryn Mawr.

AT THE WOMEN'S REPUBLICAN CLUB Miss Ellen Eastman was honored at a luncheon by her mother, Mrs. Chase Eastman of Jackson st., Newton Center.

THE ANNUAL BUSINESS meeting of the Junior League Garden Club took place at the league rooms at 3 today. Mrs. Gordon Abbott is the present president. These club's regular meetings occur monthly, and Mrs. Lloyd D. Brace holds the position of head of the program committee. Mrs. Rodman Peabody, a member of the Milton Garden Club, gave an interesting talk on winter flower substitutes, suggesting things to use for decoration in the home.

THE ENTERTAINMENT AT the Copley-Plaza last evening for the benefit of the junior division of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children was well attended by many society notables. Those who had taken boxes for this affair included Governor Allen, Mrs. Robert Herrick, Miss Louise Case, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. George S. West, Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Pingree, Mr. John Macomber, Mr. Bayard Tuckerman and Mr. Merrill Hunt. Evening dress was worn by the majority. Mrs. Allen a wrap was of a gorgeous red; Mrs. Horton Pushee had on a charming gown of green-blue crepe; Mrs. Joseph E. Beabury was wearing purple moire; Mrs. George Hoague had on a black evening frock and white wrap trimmed with green. Also in attendance was Miss Mary Hunnewell in a dress of black and a silver sequin scarf, and Miss Harriet Morss likewise in black. The Junior League girls ushering and selling flowers looked attractive in bright colored evening gowns with which they wore striking Spanish shawls. Miss Margaret Bent, who was chairman of the volunteer service, was smartly gowned in a flowered brocade, and her slippers were of green and gold.

THE ANNUAL LUNCHEON of the National Civic Federation was held at the Copley-Plaza with Mrs. Horace Frazer as chairman of the lunch committee. She was assisted by Miss Harriet Morss, Miss Mary Otis and Mrs. Frederick S. Whitwell. The following named society girls took the part of waitresses: Miss Anne Houghton, Miss Elizabeth DeP. Hovey, Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, Miss Minnie Palfrey, Miss Barbara Wendell, Miss Edith Bullock, Miss Elizabeth Denham, Miss Alice Newell, Miss Nancy Hallowell, Miss Rebecca Hallowell, Miss Louise Paine, Miss Anne Frothingham, Miss Caroline Sheldon, Miss Priscilla Bramhall, Miss Ethel Grew, Miss Kathryn Watson, Miss Rachel Warner, Miss Polly Winslow, Miss Molly Adams, Miss Josephine Kip, Miss Carol Paine, Miss Marion Frazer, Miss Phyllis Ellsworth, Miss Virginia Gardner, Miss Emily Wallou, Miss Elizabeth Thomas, Miss Barbara Welch, Miss Rosamond Musgrave, Mrs. Geiston T. King, Mrs. Robert D. Almy, Mrs. Arthur T. Lyman, Mrs. James M. Newell, Jr., Mrs. Roger Converse, Mrs. Kenard Wakefield.

Betty Alden

Miss Mildred Cobb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Cobb of Summer rd., Brookline, as she made her bow to society at a tea at the Women's Republican Club.

Decidedly Feminine Are the New Coats With Their Neat Trimmings of Natural Seal and Kolinsky

(SKETCHED IN PARIS)

Paris Bureau of the Boston Evening American

PARIS, France, Nov 19—The seal of approval this season, means that lovely lustrous fur in its natural color. Some of the smartest coats designed for walking wear, and some lovely suits, too, have sported trimmings of natural seal in all its rich brown glory.

It is especially good with brown tweeds of all shades. Another fur that is going places this autumn is kolinsky. It is being used in original treatments on daytime coats, and is used to trim evening wraps, blending especially with the rose shades that are so much liked for these garments.

The cloth coat continues to make the most of its popularity. The black cloth coat is especially well liked.

We show today a lovely bolero coat by Jenny. It is of very dark brown homespun with a shawl collar and cuffs of natural unplucked seal. The cut of the coat is quite complicated. Starting at the right side of the front, the bolero is carried around to the back in a diagonal line and ends in a point at the left side just back of the arm.

(SKETCHED IN PARIS)

REPEATING this diagonal, one-sided line, a wrapped-around piece is placed on the lower part of the coat. There is a patch-pocket at one side, and just above the elbow, the diagonal line is further emphasized by the empiecements that trim the sleeves.

THE very striking and smart suit of hunter's green velours de laine, lavishly trimmed with dark kolinsky is from Worth. The three-quarter length coat is snug at the bodice and flares in wide fur-trimmed godets at the sides. The skirt is laid in four deep pleats at the front.

Other guests who will supplement with words the arguments presented by the inanimate guest, will be Mr J S Sayre, sales manager of the Kelvinator Co.; Mr. G Stuffinger manager of the Kelvinator branches and Mr. Arden Xin key vice president of McMan Inc., of Detroit. Mr Harry Troutwine, New England manager for the Kelvinator Co., will preside and act as master of ceremonies

In speaking of the luncheon and convention, Mr Troutwine says, "Every Kelvinator representative looks upon this advance showing of the new models as more than part of a sales campaign. They recognize the fact that the Kelvinator was a pioneer in the mechanical refrigeration field 15 years ago and that the Kelvinator Co. today is the oldest of the mechanical refrigeration producers in the point of continuous production of such units

"The entire staff feels that in the new line the Kelvinator engineers have produced models which embody mechanical improvements and advances in cabinet design which will give to this old established line a new and deserved prestige in its specialized field

The luncheon, which is a part of the convention program, is expected to be attended by about 200 members of the New England organization and executives from the home offices and factory.

Quincy Man Attacked by Ferocious Fish

A fish story is told by Joseph Purpura, of Elm pl., Quincy, and he insists there's nothing fishy about it While he was fishing at Nantasket, he says, he was attacked by a fish. The freak fish was brought in Quincy by a local fish market men and old anglers failed to identify it

The fiend is about three feet long, about two feet wide and rather flat. Its mouth, almost as big as its body, has 50 teeth on the lower jaw and half as many on the upper. On the under part of the body are two legs, each having five claws.

The Newest Idea in Ensembles for the Holidays

It used to be that a winter suit was considered more or less of a luxury incident to the very fashionable wardrobe—the reason for that being the fact that it was thought not practical unless there were a great number of other costumes to supplement it Recent developments have proved the fallacy of this idea, for the winter suit or ensemble now stands as one of the most practical additions a wardrobe can boast—almost a necessity in the well-rounded clothes scheme

The new ensembles have been fashioned to defy the coldest blasts of a winter's day. They are heavier than the fall and spring versions and they are richly furred for added warmth as well as chic. If you can find that your fur coat is a bit burdensome for that shopping trip in town, your first thought is your ensemble — perfect, of course! It may be a tweed tailored in the more feminine manner; or it may be a soft woolen fabric more formally executed in its detail and luxuriously furred, ideally suitable for the most exactingly formal daytime occasion. It would be hard to think of a day when you would not find your ensemble an important cog in the smart wheel of fashion

Two costume skits sketched here are typical of the formal and informal sides of the ensemble mode One is a swagger tweed mixture developed on the trim yet sumly feminine line which is demanded of the 1929 sports and town suit. The three-quarter length coat is trimmed with caracul fur which has a low placed flare and the very feminine blouse is of satin

The other ensemble is the versatile sort of thing which has the correct formality for afternoon functions but would not seem out of place if worn throughout the day. It has a seven-eighth length coat of broadcloth richly collared in natural lynx. The flaring border of the coat is echoed in the flare of the skirt. The skirt and blouse theme of this ensemble may be varied with a smart frock which harmonizes with the coat

Corduroy Is Smart and Practical

THE ensemble theme has been advanced in almost every imaginable guise but the very latest seems to have taken quite a different fashion tack—that of the coat and frock having related detail and silhouette

This new idea is especially interesting when considered in relation to the higher waisted, longer skirted mode brought forward this season Using the related detail and silhouette theme, the frock and coat assume a more perfect fashion unity than ever before There is no danger in this ensemble idea that a princess frock with long, flaring lines will be incongruously complemented by a coat entirely different in line and length

An ensemble from Yvonne Carette proves a striking example of how the related detail and silhouette effect is worked out Here a detail seaming at the waistline of a tweed coat is exactly repeated at the waist of the accompanying frock Likewise the frock of corduroy weave transparent velvet has a slightly flared skirt which finds an echo in the tapering flared line of the coat Thus you can see how a unique fashion relationship is cleverly established

Corduroy adds an interesting surface to the smooth path of fashion It is used for clever little jacket suits to be worn under the winter coat and for smart frocks. There is a ribbed jersey that is often called wool corduroy Both these fabrics are used for sportswear and appear in a variety of colors. The material has the advantage of novelty and is an excellent medium for the long, slender lines that characterize the new mode

Fore River to Build Latest in Liners

Talking movies, swimming pools, tennis courts and extra wide promenade decks, allowing more area per passenger than any other American-built ship, are among features to be incorporated in the two new mail ships ordered by the Mareon Line for the South Seas and Australian service They will be built at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy and will cost, completed, $7,800,000 each Three-fourths of the construction cost or $11,700,000, has been loaned the owners by the Shipping Board.

COSMOPOLITAN GIVES 'BOSTON' OPERA

By MOSES SMITH

BEGINNING its second week of popular-priced opera at the Arlington Theater, the Cosmopolitan Opera Company performed Verdi's "Ballo in Maschera." This curious work has its scene in Boston, of all places; time, the colonial period

The costumes used last night were not exactly strict "colonial," but that detail was not important since Verdi's only reason for selecting Boston was to avoid the censorial wrath of his own day. The coincidence of names, however, in view of recent developments here in the drama, is ironical

There were two very fine singers on the stage. One of them was the ever-reliable Mario Valle, as Reinhardt, secretary to the governor. The other was Clara Shear, whose last previous appearance here in opera was with the Chicago Opera Company. So far as we can recall, Miss Shear has never sung as well as she did last night. Her voice was richer, purer, freer And though she has always been a capable actress, she was especially articulate in this respect as the page in this opera.

Fortunato De Angelis was the governor and Emilia Sargeri the Amelia. Both have seen better operatic days, but it is well to repeat that their knowledge of routine is a valuable factor in a popular-priced production. After all, the important thing is to have operas heard more often, in acceptable fashion.

Lydia Van Gilder was the Ulrica, and Benedetto Challis and Luis Trucehi were the two conspirators with the exceedingly unromantic names of Samuel and Tom. Mr. Simeoni did wonders with a reduced orchestra, and guided the whole performance with unceasing vigor and vigilance.

FANCY STYLES AT SHOW

The very latest in milady's foot wear together with many unusual styles will be exhibited at the eighth annual official Shoe Show to be held at the Hotel Statler, January 14, 15 and 16.

Under the personal supervision of Phil Methlado more than 100 attractive girls will display this footwear embracing varied creations and exclusive styles have evolved the past few months.

The show itself is again in charge of A. G. Brown, one of the best known shoe men of the East He announces that this year three entire floors of the hotel will be devoted exclusively to exhibits, and he expects more than 10,000 shoe manufacturers and buyers from every section of the country.

Swedish Prince's Doctor Made Count

Turin, Italy, Nov 19—The doctor who presided at the birth of Crown Prince Humbert, a little more than 25 years ago, had his reward on the occasion of the prince's engagement to Princess Marie Jose of Belgium He will henceforth be known as Count Giavanni Quirico, the royal family having ennobled him for more than 30 years' service to the House of Savoy.

To Hear Officials on Utilities

The special commission on the control and conduct of public utilities will conduct a public hearing Friday, November 22, for members of the General Court and city and town officials, starting at 10 30 o'clock.

If time permits, other witnesses, who were not heard at the last general hearing, will be given an opportunity to speak.

Air Romance, Better Than "Chickie"

What Has Happened

MARY PATRICIA DAWN, beautiful, young brunette, meets the last of her dreams in the person of Guy Elliott, aviator. Guy is developing a perfect airplane in the plant of old William Bryce. Happy days follow with Pat and Guy in love. Then comes Barbara Bryce, young widow of Bryce's son, with her seductive lure. Later Guy receives a visit from Barbara and her young son, upon whom old Bryce squanders a fortune. Tom Burns, a workman, rages about the unfairness of wealth. His invalid son is dying for want of necessities. When Bryce refuses a loan, Burns swears revenge. He robs the office safe and is captured after a gun fight. Preparations are being made for Pat to enter college. Hearing much gossip about the youth of today, Mrs. Dawn prays that Pat will remain the sweet girl she is.

CHAPTER 15.

THE clear blue heavens, but in all their wide expanse nothing but that plane spinning like a top—spinning downward.

She stood with glazed eyes and watched. Straining for the sight of a figure rising from the cockpit, plunging over the side, a parachute opening.

Spirals sharper, narrower. Off there to the northeast the plane seemed almost on a level with their eyes. No pilot jumped. Then the plane shot downward; shot from sight.

Pat turned to her mother with a blind look of terror. "He's crashed."

"You don't know. It may be much higher—much further off. It may not be he!"

Pat pushed off her mother's restraining arm and went darting across the patio. She was in her car and half way down the drive as Laura came running across the garden.

"Pat—NO! Pat, wait. Your father'll be back any moment. I'll go."

The girl looked out with white, stony face. She pleaded hoarsely: "Mother—don't! I'm all right. I just want to see. I won't speed! I won't come. Mother! I can't WAIT!"

She went down the hills. It seemed that the wind rushed at the stark, desolate levels—met her. She drove through hurricanes. Off there in the levels—in the stark, desolate levels—it was all quiet.

She took a cross road. Somewhere down here, all at once across a wide, level field, she noticed smoke—a little pillar of smoke. Her hands frozze on the steering wheel. The car shot ahead dizzily.

"I mustn't do that," she thought distractedly. "The plane is burning."

A little further on she came upon some half-dozen parked automobiles. So it was here—just along here.

She got out of the car and went running across the great field in the direction of the smoke. She was one the fringe of the hysterical crowd.

Fifty feet distant was the smoking mass, the wings sticking out like the arms of a cross. Already the wreck was roped against.

"Was he? Mangled beyond recognition. Down 250 feet before he jumped. Trying to save the plane, I guess. I got here just as they took him away."

Softly, forming the awful word "Who?"

Pat turned. All the blood in her body went flying through her brain. Checking up on the planes—now!

She reached the flying field. She stood for one moment shielding her eyes from the glare of all these brilliant wings. They flashed so bright—so brave. She prayed through the whistle and storm in her heart.

Then she was running. The whole earth was lost in this great yellow glow. This golden flash against which a man strode—a man who now turned—who now ran up and caught her.

Guy! NOT YOU!" she moaned in wild relief.

She saw his face, anxious, full of love, leaning over her. She closed her eyes and smiled.

"Pat, dear—you thought it was I? But why? You're white as a little ghost."

He said it as though he were happy. She wanted to see if this were true.

When he found her eyes seeking his, he gave a deep laugh and caught her to him. And he held her like this, sitting in the little plane.

He smoothed her hair. It was music going over her—happy music.

"From the garden you saw it falling? It's a bigger plane than mine. And you went dashing there alone, thinking it I? Pat, if it were?"

She shuddered against him.

He said with that queer, catchy

COUNCIL NOT FRIENDLY TO TUNNEL

Transit Commission Is Said to Also Be Cold Toward Mayor Nichols' Plan

Threats by Boston city councilors to seek action that would block the East Boston vehicular tunnel project caused wide apprehension today that the tunnel plan might be "scrapped."

A statement by Chairman Thomas F. Sullivan of the Boston transit commission that the metropolitan planning board's plans for a $16,000,000 tunnel were accepted by his organization because Mayor Nichols so desired it, although they believed plans they drew up themselves were better, caused a feeling of resentment to sweep through the council at its regular meeting.

This was followed by a claim by Councilor John I. Fitzgerald of the West End that the council, last summer, was "blackjacked" into accepting the legislative act relative to the tunnel.

LEGS COURT PETITION

Fitzgerald advocated rescinding the previous action of the council and Councilor Herman L. Bush suggested that the finance commission round up ten taxpayers and have them petition the Supreme Court to prevent the city from adopting the so-called Harriman plan.

President Timothy F. Donovan called on the council to keep its word in the tunnel project. He cited the need for the tunnel without further delay.

As a result no formal action was taken toward holding up work on the tunnel, although Fitzgerald and Bush indicated that they were not through protesting.

Chairman Sullivan admitted, after long questioning by the members in executive session, that in his opinion and that of the other two members of the commission, Nathan A. Heller and Joseph B. Newton, the original plans drawn and submitted by them were superior to the Harriman plan.

The plan submitted by the Metropolitan planning division, while not meeting with the approval of the members of the transit commission nor its engineer, Ernest R. Springer, was nevertheless accepted by all the members at the request of Mayor Nichols, as every plan leaving the department is signed regardless of the likes or dislikes of the board, Chairman Sullivan said.

DENIES BOARD THREATENED

He denied that members of the commission had been threatened with loss of their positions if they had refused to draw their plans for the tunnel according to those submitted by the metropolitan planning division instead of following their original plans.

Instead of costing the $18,000,000 called for, the city will be forced to pay at least $100,000,000 before the tunnel is completed under the Harriman plan," Councilor Fitzgerald informed his colleagues. The land takings alone will cost $50,000,000 because of the costly land sites selected for the openings."

Councilor William A. Motley of Roxbury, questioning Chairman Sullivan, brought out the fact that Mayor Nichols while a member of the Boston Transit Commission in 1921 favored a straight-line tunnel to East Boston as one that would save the city thousands of dollars. Chairman Sullivan also said that the plans drawn and submitted by his board called for a straight-line tunnel.

Bone Fracture Jinx Gives Editor 25th

The jinx that has given A. E. Starkey, editor and publisher of the Saugus Herald, the reputation of having achieved the largest number of bone fractures of anyone extant in the town of Saugus has caught up with him again.

To his total of 24 fractures, sang from the breaking exactly half his 24 ribs in the cracking of vertebra, he has just added the feat of smashing the little toe on his left foot.

It is significant to Starkey that though he is an enthusiast in action all of his accidents occurred on the ground. For this reasons he intends to keep off the earth as much as possible.

Hereafter slippers, bathing suit, sidewalk slippers, bathing suit, an unnoticed hole in the road, a skidding flivver have caused the accidents that broke the other 24 bones. And now a mere knock encountered with unexpected violence in the dark has put his 25th foot note of [illegible] record.

But nothing has ever hung me in the air, says the Saugus editor, "Experience has taught me that so long as a person remains in the air nothing can happen to him, and a man and for safety's sake I intend of fly as much as possible.

Cop Drops Charge Against Superiors

No formal charge will be presented against Lieut. Harry N. Dickinson and Sergt. Aiden D. Wards of the Dudley st. station by Patrolman Thomas Sullivan it was announced at police headquarters in connection with the complaint of the officer that he was made the victim of a bribery plot.

Police Commissioner Wilson's office made it plain that no formal complaint had been entered against the superior officers and intimated that they considered the matter closed.

N.E. GOVERNORS NAME RAIL COMMITTEE

Call for First Meeting on Friday Afternoon at the State House

The personnel of the New England Governors' railroad committee was announced here today by Dudley Harmon, executive vice-president of the New England council, who has served as secretary of the joint conferences.

It was also announced that the committee would hold its first meeting at the State House Friday afternoon.

The call for the meeting was sent out by George L. Crooker of Providence, to whom the governors delegated the task of calling the committee together.

Mr. Crooker is chairman of the Rhode Island commission on foreign and domestic commerce, the members of which were appointed by Governor Case as the Rhode Island members of the joint committee.

He also served as chairman of the temporary committee appointed by the governors when they were first called together by the New England council at Springfield, September 16, for consideration of the New England railroad situation.

It is expected that the committee will especially consider various proposals for consolidation of New England railroads.

SEEK HUB HEIRS OF ACTRESS

Boston heirs to the $70,000 estate of Jeannie Winston, famous comic opera star of the last century, who died in Washington, October 9, aged 2? are being sought.

Miss Winston was immensely popular with the Mauve Decade folk who used to flock especially to hear her sing "The Last Rose of Summer" in "Martha."

In 1888, Jeannie Winston was the fascinating young star of the old Grand Opera House in Washington. She was feted and entertained royally, wherever she went but always she maintained the reserve and mystery about her childhood which she never would reveal.

Her real name was concealed under a stage name and the one she used on all occasions of business or official correspondence. Twenty-five years ago, when retiring from the stage she went to Washington to live. She bought a little house and, surrounded with pictures, books and her piano, she settled down for a quiet life.

Predicts Frequent Weather Reports

The time is not far distant when graphic weather reports will be received by telephone every day, hour by hour in Boston, stated Capt. Albert L. Eaton, superintendent of the Boston Municipal Airport in an address before the Cambridge Business Society at the Parker House.

FIGHT FIRE IN GAS MASKS

Somerville firemen wore gas masks today while fighting flames at damaged three stores in the Lowell's brick block at 400-412R Highland ave. Heavy damage from the blaze alarmed the neighborhood, but the fire was extinguished with a loss of only $4000.

The establishments damaged are the Arlington Dye Works, Porter Sq. Liquor & Soft Drink Co., Sweet & Son smoke shop and Linderman furniture store.

Mrs. Isabel Vaughan and son, Arthur, living in a house adjoining the block, fled when the flames threatened. The fire did not reach the house however.

Fireman Hurt in Roxbury Blaze

One fireman was injured and $1500 damage was done to the four-story brick building at 178 Quincy st., Roxbury, as a result of an early morning fire.

Francis Connors, of No. 774 Sixth st., South Boston, was treated the City Hospital, lacerations to the left foot, a split upper lip and a sprained left wrist, when he tripped over a hose while fighting the blaze. He is a member of Engine Co. No. 7.

The fire started, according to the police of the Dudley st. police station, in the delicatessen store on the ground floor and spread rapidly to the second floor, which is occupied by families. Most occupants remained in the house although firemen had to depart if need be.

EXPENSE IS DECLARED 'UNSOUND'

High School Co-operative Courses Are Also Subject of Criticism

The Boston public schools have cost $16,024,500 for the period from Jan 1 to Nov 1, according to the report submitted to the school committee by Business Manager Alexander Sullivan, and in which the development of shop instruction in intermediate schools is scored as unsound and expensive.

Maintenance items under the control of the school committee took up $12,260,446, and alteration and repair of buildings by the school-house commission comprised $1-438177. Land plans and acquisitions of new buildings cost $2,326,-?7?

Shop instruction in intermediate schools is costly and unsound educationally as well as financially, according to the report which recommends a general shop which shall be inexpensive and which would eliminate costly construction and equipment.

Criticism is made of the high school co-operative courses in which the pupil spends one week in the school and one week in an outside shop or manufacturing plant.

"Before there is additional expansion of co-operative industrial work (in high schools)," says the committee, "careful study should be made of the value of the courses."

The members of the survey board also cite the fact that headmasters and high schools now have little or no jurisdiction over these high school shops.

Find Big Still at Beverly Gardens

Police raided the Beverly Gardens area in Beverly today and found a 2000-gallon still in operation and arrested three men. The gardens are supposed to specialize in glad iolus.

In addition to bulbs and house, the place, headed by Lieut. Francis J. Minton, found 12,000 gallons of mash in process of manufacture into liquor.

The men arrested are Marion Frasuta, 30, of Salem st., Chelsea; Frank Tagna, 37, of Washington st., Roxbury, and Tony Cagino, 29, of Taylor st., Waltham. They were charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell.

Leroy W. Stott Left Estate of $334,000

An inventory filed in probate court at Dedham by Ferdinand M. Holmes, Annie K. Crafts and Francis J. Swift, as appraisers, revealed that Leroy W. Stott of Franklin died intestate with personal property amounting to $334,425. It is held in trust for Mrs. Annie A. Stott, the widow, and three children. The Old Colony Trust Co. and Alfred W. Davis are named as trustee.

Magazine Auction at Postoffice

The second sale of undelivered magazines of current issue will be held by the local post office officials at the temporary main post office at State pier and Atlantic ave., tomorrow at 12:15, according to announcement made by Postmaster Dow.

The publications will be packed into bundles, each of which will contain six assorted magazines. The bundles will be auctioned.

O'Neils Return From Vacation Abroad

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. O'Neil of Boston returned on the Leviathan, after spending their first vacation in 16 years in Europe.

O'Neil heard of the election of James M. Curley as mayor while in Dublin, and from there he sent a cablegram of congratulations. He believes that a new day has dawned for the Democracy of Massachusetts.

Thug Robs Milk Driver of $10

Harry Sorsko of Alden st., Malden, milk wagon driver reported to Chelsea police today that while delivering milk early this morning on Front st., that city, he was held up and robbed of $10.35. Sorsko said two men leaped on him from a doorway and while one held him the other went through his pockets.

VOTE TO MAKE BUILDING AN OPEN FORUM

"Crank" Issue Is Raised by Objectors, but Fails to Influence Decision

The portals of the Old South Meeting House are to be opened to all speakers on all subjects, as in Hyde Park in London, as a result of a vote of the Old South Association, following two hours of discussion.

"Unpopular causes" under the new policy of the association, will be allowed to be presented.

Mrs. Katherine Loring attempted to have the use of the hall restricted to speakers on religious, charitable or educational matters, but her resolution was defeated by a vote of 29 to 12.

Courtney Crocker offered a resolution allowing for "unrestricted" use of the hall. The Crocker resolution will be adopted after a few minor changes are made.

"STRANGE INTERLUDE" SPLIT

The refusal of the association to allow the holding of a protest meeting on the banning of "Strange Interlude" in Boston by Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols led to a split in the membership, it was understood, and the meeting was held to clear up the discussion that followed.

Crocker, in presenting his resolution, cited the fact that in Hyde Park, London, speakers on any and all subjects are allowed to speak without restriction.

He said that the danger in radical speech came in the supression of it.

"Let it dissipate itself freely and then it will never blow up," he said.

The idea that Boston Common was a free forum was assailed by Richard W. Hale, who seconded the Crocker resolution.

LOWELL OBJECTS

Hale said that, very properly, the Common was under supervision of the park department of the city of Boston "if it is licensed speakers there makes any remarks which may be objectionable to the city canon or superintendent of police," he said, "his permit to speak is immediately cancelled."

President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, while expressing himself in favor of free speech, said that he did not care to see the Old South Meeting House advertised as "a meeting place for all cranks on all subjects for all citizens under all circumstances."

George W. Wolkins, who presented Miss Loring's resolution, took a fling at "pinkish reds," and said it was clearly contrary to the purpose of the founders of the Old South Association to permit the hall to be used by birth-control meetings or memorial meetings for any one who was not "a public benefactor."

RUM SMUGGLER FINED $3500

Burkes Kravit of James st., Brookline, a well known Boston sportsman, paid a fine of $3500 in the Federal Court, received a suspended sentence of four months in jail and was put on probation for a year on his plea of guilty to an indictment charging conspiracy to smuggle liquor into the United States in 1925.

The fine is one of the largest imposed for a liquor offense in the Federal Court here.

Others in court on the same indictment were John Compagna of Somerville and Hyman Abrams of Chelsea, both of whom were fined $1050 and were given suspended sentences of three months and a year's probation. It was alleged that 600 cases of liquor were landed at Somerset, Mass.

At Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Schell standing on the steps of Holy Trinity Church, Shawmut ave., where their golden wedding mass was celebrated. All of their immediate family, many relatives and friends were in attendance and wishes for the observance of the diamond wedding were extended to the couple.

MASS BEGINS 'DAY OF DAYS'

A golden wedding mass in Holy Trinity Church, Shawmut ave., ushered in the "day of days" for Mr. and Mrs. John M. Schell of, Beach Glen st., Roxbury, lifelong residents of Boston.

During the mass the musical program was rendered by Mrs. Cecilia Keller, soprano; Miss Mathilda Walter, contralto, and Miss Adelaide Breen, organist.

Following the mass the immediate family, consisting of five children, 18 grandchildren and a great-grandchild, repaired to Casino Hall Shawmut ave., where festivities were continued for several hours. There were games and prizes for the youngsters.

Later was held a reception at which relatives, friends and representatives of various organizations with which the couple are affiliated attended.

The couple were recipients of many presents in gold.

John M. Schell and his brother William J. (21 years his junior), are Spanish War Veterans. This is believed to be a record. The elder was in the navy band from 1888 until 1908. He has also played with leading bands and orchestras.

He is now in the printing business and is a member of Printing Pressmen Union No. 67, Boston Musicians Protective Association, Musicians Mutual Relief Society, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, Past Chief Rangers Association, Knights of Columbus, Bishop Cheverus Assembly Order of the Alhambra, Catholic Casino Club, United Spanish War Veterans and the Military Order of Serpents. Mrs. Schell is also connected with many organizations.

Veteran Postal Official to Quit

After 47 years in the Boston Postal Service, Clarence P. Coburn, 74 years, superintendent of the Roxbury Crossing Station, will be retired tomorrow. His service has been practically continuous. His absence from duty totals only five days in the 47 years.

On Feb. 1, 1889, Thomas, then postmaster, transferred Coburn to the superintendency of the Roxbury Crossing Station, established on that date at Roxbury Crossing. During the past 21 years, this office, located in an active business and residential section, has served a large population.

Enjoins Claimants in Insurance Suits

On petition of Alfred Schrigley, receiver for the Bristol Mutual Liability Insurance Company of New Bedford, Judge Sanderson of the Supreme Court granted a temporary injunction restraining all claimants against the company from further proceedings in any way.

Schrigley told the courts that 668 persons have notified him of claims and 573 suits have already been brought in which the company has filed an appearance. He also stated that about 13,000 persons will be involved in the ultimate pais of claims.

Men Wounded as They Fled Garage

Two young men about 20 years of were believed to have been injured by a charge of buckshot as they escaped from the garage of the Perry Buzzo & Dean Co., scrap metal dealers of 216 West First st., South Boston. A report was made to the Athens st. police station by Peter Mortimsen of 81 Jilill st., East Weymouth, who is a watchman at the plant.

According to his story, he discovered the boys in hiding and fired a shot at them when they refused to leave. The hospitals have been notified to report any cases of buckshot treatment.

2 WOMEN LEAP TO SAFETY AS CAR WRECKED

Auto Stalls on Woburn Crossing and Express to Lowell Hurls It 25 Feet

Two Woburn women jumped to safety as an express train demolished their car at the North Woburn crossing of the B. & M. railroad.

The car had stalled on the tracks and the women were attempting to push it out of the path of the train. They jumped for safety as the engine of the express hurled the car 25 feet against a pole.

Stanley E. Hurd, station master at North Woburn station, ran down the tracks toward the approaching train but he was too late and the attempts of the engineer to stop the train in such a short space, was unsuccessful.

The women were Mrs. Ida Chamberlain and Miss Frances Allan, both of Fletcher rd., Woburn. The machine was a new one, owned and driven by Mrs. Chamberlain.

After several vain attempts to start the motor the women alighted from the machine and attempted to shove it off the tracks.

The station master, who also tends the gates at the crossing, came out at this point and, after lowering the gates half-way, he ran down the tracks to stop the train.

The train was a Boston to Lowell express, with a large number of passengers aboard. Hundreds of them piled out of the coaches when the train stopped after hurling the car into a mass of wreckage against the pole. The engine was not damaged by the collision and, after a brief delay, the train continued its run.

TO DISTRIBUTE 4000 DINNERS

Over four thousand Thanksgiving dinners will be given to the poor and needy of Boston next week by the Volunteers of America.

In most cases the dinners will be delivered to homes the day before Thanksgiving. Each basket will contain enough for at least three square meals for the entire family, whatever the size.

Families with children are always given preference in the distribution. Applications for baskets began to reach Volunteers' headquarters at the end of October.

Sees Tercentenary as Chance to Show World

"The Massachusetts Bay Tercentenary will show that we are not the provincial, ancestor-worshiping, inhospitable people that many in the world think," President Walsh of the Tercentenary Corporation said, in the fourth lecture on tercentenary subjects in the Public Library.

"We are about to invite the world to behold our progress during 300 years," said Walsh, "to see how we have administered the sacred trust won for us and bequeathed to us by the Puritans. In thus putting ourselves on exhibition we may be able to remove many misconceptions about our modes, manners, belief and aspirations.

"We should surely lay the ghost of many legends; for instance, that we are provincial that we are ancestor-worshippers, that we are cold and inhospitable and that our intellectual horizon is low and near, and that we assume an overlordship of the morals of other people.

"Perhaps we may be able to expose the falsehoods of the envious, that in things touching material progress we are slipping, by showing abundantly that in everything really essential to happiness, prosperity and progress we still enjoy unchallenged primacy."

TRUCK DRIVER HELD IN DEATH

As she crossed Moody st., Waltham, going from a mill where she was employed, to her home, Mrs Annie Harwood, 60, of South st., Waltham, was struck by a small truck and suffered injuries that resulted in her death about an hour later.

Louis Nocert, 17, of Exchange st., Waltham, was arrested on a charge of manslaughter after the accident and was admitted to bail in $1000. Police say other charges will be made against him.

GETS 6 MONTHS FOR PETTING

Lloyd S. Potter, 22, of Walnut st., New Bedford, employed in a Boston department store, must spend six months in the house of correction as a result of various charges filed by an Arlington girl.

Judge Arthur P. Stone in Cambridge district court sentenced Potter after he pleaded guilty to simple assault.

Potter was allowed to plead to the less serious charge following a conference between his counsel and Judge Stone.

According to testimony of Patrolman Arthur Hollis, he observed Miss Mary Globbe, 18, of Egerton st., Arlington, jump from Potter's parked car near the Arlington line in Cambridge early Sunday morning.

Miss Globbe said she went to a Huntington ave. dance hall Saturday night with a Cambridge girl. Potter offered to drive them to their homes and they accepted. After leaving the Cambridge girl, Potter drove along the parkway until he reached a spot near the city line where he parked. Potter testified he had been "petting" with the girl for an hour.

Judge Stone before he disposed of the case, said it was not for him to say whether it was wise for girls to go to dances and allow men to pick them up. On the other hand, he continued, Potter had no right to do what he did and he felt that he must sentence him in justice to the community.

WIFE SAYS SHE SUPPORTED GROVER

Ex-Dancer Asks Divorce, Says Husband Fled When He Got a Job

Testimony that she supported her husband for a time after they eloped and that he finally deserted her after his father gave him a job, featured divorce proceedings brought in Salem Probate Court by Mrs. Edythe A. Grover, former vaudeville dancer, against Lyndon V. Grover, Jr., son of a wealthy Lynn shoe manufacturer, himself a figure in a divorce case a few years ago.

Young Grover, according to the wife, tired of married life soon after he went to work and told her he intended to leave her. He finally did walk out, she said, seven months after they were married.

The case was taken under advisement by Judge Aldert P. White. Grover did not contest it.

The Grovers have figured in the public eye many times. Grover's father instituted divorce proceedings in 1926. The action was dismissed after startling testimony, which included the activities of "Count" Paul Moste in the Grover family life.

Young Grover was arrested in 1927 on a charge of non-support of a two-year-old child, the mother of which was Miss Catherine McKeigan, 20-year-old Lynn girl. He had been brought into court two years previous and ordered to pay $7 a week to support the baby. His failure to abide by the rule of the court led to his appearance in court.

On the second occasion, his father paid assessments in arrears, totalling $49, and also some fines imposed at the same time for violations of the automobile laws.

The Grovers were married in Wolfboro, N. H., May 30, 1925, by Rev. John H. McMurray, after eloping from Salem. They had previously secured a waiver of the five-day law, and were advised to the minister by a man who represented himself to be a close friend of Grover's father.

At the time it was said Grover wished to keep the marriage secret for six months, at the end of which he would be financially independent and would not fear being cut off by his father.

During this period, the wife testified, that she supported him by her vaudeville earnings

SHAFFER HELD ON MANN ACT

Charles H. Shaffer of Edison pk., Quincy, is under arrest here as a fugitive from justice from Kentucky. Shaffer is wanted to answer a federal indictment charging him with violation of the white slave traffic act.

United States Commissioner Jenney ordered him held in $3000 bail pending the formality of ordering him removed to the southern state.

Petition Against First Aid Order

The State Department of Public Utilities has received from the Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany, and New York, New Haven & Hartford a request for relief from being required to install first aid equipment in baggage, combination and caboose cars regularly operated by them.

As a result, Thursday at 11 a. m. has been set for a hearing on the petition.

In making the request the petitioners have expressed the opinion that "it is not necessary or desirable" to have such equipment.

SCHOOLGIRL, LURED INTO CRIME, LINKED NOW IN "SLAVE" SLAYING

RUM STARTED HER ON ROAD TO RUIN

Visit to Bootlegger's After Football Game Launched Career of Reinstein Witness

The Boston Evening American today publishes the third installment of a series on the dangers to schoolgirls and boys in Boston.

The step from innocent schoolgirl to material witness in a sordid gang slaying is a long one, but it was taken by a Boston girl in a comparatively short time.

As time flies the period was short, for the underworld moves swiftly in engulfing its victims, and the descent to the depths is sometimes made at dizzy speed.

A handful of years ago a joyous, schoolgirl, fond of dancing, the theater and other innocent pastimes. Today she is a broken wreck of a woman, a drug-ridden factor in the Samuel Reinstein murder.

Bootleg liquor was the cause of her downfall, and a bootlegger launched her on the sea of crime and debauchery, in which she is still struggling, but battered, hopeless and well nigh spent.

The end is not yet, but if she escapes the clutches of the law for connection with the cold-blooded killing of Reinstein, the girl probably will die in the agony of drug addiction, alone and friendless.

The story of this hapless victim of the underworld, whom we will call Helen Dalton, is interwoven with that of her sister and a girl chum, a resident of Greater Boston.

The sister was led to her undoing, and the Greater Boston girl stands branded as a thief, a disorderly woman, an extortionist and a drug addict, although not yet thirty.

Although fictitious names are used in these stories, the incidents related are facts and are on record in the files of the authorities.

STUDENT STARTS HER

The story of Helen Dalton as far as this recital is concerned, begins in 1920, when she had just left high school, in which her sister Margaret was still a student.

That year Helen became acquainted with a student, who took her to one of the big football games at the Stadium. The weather was chilly and Helen's escort produced a flask, from which he induced Helen to take a number of drinks. In consequence the girl agreed to go out with him that night, and he telephoned her sister to join them as companion to another student.

In the course of the evening the party visited the headquarters of a bootlegger to replenish their supply, and the students introduced their girl friends to the dispenser of liquor. The bootlegger became infatuated with Helen, who at that time was a very pretty girl, and managed to obtain her telephone number.

Then he began a campaign to win the girl's favor, by showering her with gifts and entertaining her lavishly. The campaign was successful and the girl's downfall was accomplished.

Then Helen began to learn things about society of which she had never dreamed. She found that her "sweetheart" was a human reptile of the most cold-blooded and remorseless type, who forced her into a life of shame so that he might profit by her earnings. He made the girl all he knew of viciousness and criminality, and induced her to involve her sister in many of her activities.

Among other underworld characters, Helen came in contact with shoplifters, or "boosters," as they are known. At the request of the bootlegger, they taught Helen the technique of their profession and she was forced to take it up. Being intelligent and nimble-fingered, she became an expert, and for a time her depredations caused the authorities many anxious moments.

UNDERWORLD GUARD

In the meantime Helen had been able to inveigle her chum, Peggy Morris, then only 16, to join her, and the police estimate the pair stole many thousands of dollars' worth of goods from the stores.

Several times they were arrested, and occasionally sentenced to Sherburn, but the "boosters' protection" always functioned and they escaped jail.

On one occasion when Helen was arrested for shoplifting, Peggy walked into court and attempted to bail her on straw bail. The suspicions of a court officer resulted in the girl being taken to the bench, where she confessed that a woman, well known to the police, had been the author of the project.

In addition to shoplifting, in which Helen's sister was never officially involved, the girls were accused of having participated in extortion from numerous men, students and others. Their apartment was the nightly rendezvous of sportively inclined men, and was frequently under the surveillance of police. As a rule, the girls moved to another neighborhood in time to avoid raids. Both Helen and Peggy were extremely attractive at that time, the latter being described as a beauty.

Eventually they succeeded in trapping the son of a wealthy man, a resident of another state, and he married Peggy. After she had extracted some $250,000 from the youth, his father cut him off, and he instituted divorce proceedings. In the meantime Peggy had become a drug addict and drifted lower and lower, finally to pass out of this story, as did Margaret Dalton.

BRIDE OF THIEF

Sometime previously Helen had been introduced by her bootlegger friend to a personable thief, with whom she became friendly, and eventually married. He was captured plying his trade, and it was Helen's money, illicitly earned, that secured his temporary freedom under bonds. However, he was convicted and sent to jail, despite her efforts.

The girl brooded over this and became even more soured on law and order than before, if possible. She had long ago acquired the criminal's contempt for constituted authority, and found joy in matching her wits with the police.

An expert operator, she had always been well protected, and although detectives and police occasionally recovered coats and dresses which she had lifted, by trailing her to the apartment of a woman who turned stolen property over to a fence, they seldom had enough evidence to convict. In rare cases where conviction was obtained, an underworld lawyer, a skilled fixer, always appealed the sentence, and Helen gave the matter no further worry.

Now, sunk in despondency induced by the sentence of her husband and the drugs which she took in ever increasing quantities, Helen became desperate. Her money was gone, and she resolved to sink to the lowest depths to earn more.

During her career as a shoplifter, she had disposed of some of the dresses, coats and lingerie, in disorderly houses. High prices were obtained and no questions asked, naturally, the purchasers themselves being beyond the law.

In this way Helen had become acquainted with the persons who conduct such places, as well as the inmates, and was aware that in some instances their earnings were considerable.

CAMPAIGN OF CRIME

The girl took a desperate step and entered one of these establishments; for a time all trace of her was lost. Her identity was merged with those of a thousand other women of the same type, and the police and department store men breathed freer.

Even with her drug-blunted sensibilities, however, Helen could not stand the life, and after a while she renounced it, and returned to shop-lifting. She looked up Peggy Morris and the two girls started a new campaign against the stores.

Helen found, however, that the police had not forgotten her. Every time a shoplifting case involving any considerable amount occurred she was picked up. Much of the time the police were unable to connect her with the crimes, but their constant activity became annoying.

Last summer they brought her into court on three charges of stealing from stores. Detectives said they had watched her take a pair of baby shoes and a coat. The other charges involved two bathing suits and a blouse. It was not brought out why she had taken the baby shoes. The court was informed that the woman's husband was in prison, and she was given a year's suspended sentence.

The game was up in Boston. Helen realized she must seek a new field of operations, and so she went to a roadhouse near Providence, as an entertainer.

Becoming intimate with the proprietor's wife, she induced the woman to take a trip to New York with her, thereby incurring the wrath of her employer.

Then came the most serious of her missteps along the devious paths of the underworld. She was induced to perform an act which involved her in the Reinstein slaying, the details of which cannot be given at this time because it is a subject of police investigation.

Now Helen is in hiding, a pitiful caricature of the laughing girl who set forth for an evening of pleasure such a short time ago. Her blasted career is drawing to a close at a time when she should be enjoying the best in life, and whatever the denouement it will probably be shameful.

The next installment of the series on the dangers which confront schoolgirls and boys will be published by the Boston Evening American tomorrow.

Preference of Prisons Nets Man Long Term

Timothy Mahoney, who with Larry Goebel of Waltham, recently convicted of larceny of $160 and two necks in that city, came before Judge Fosdick in the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court at Cambridge for sentence and was sent to the detention house he signified preference for.

A report was made to the court that Mahoney had told a government investigator that if he was sent away he would like to "go to the big house, where they treat you like a man."

Did you say that, Mahoney?" asked Judge Fosdick.

"Yes," replied Mahoney.

"Well," continued the court, "you'll go there."

Mahoney was then given from three to five years in State prison.

Goebel commented to the effect that in the case of Goebel his principal trouble seemed to be drink.

"Will you leave liquor alone and watch your step if I put you on probation?" asked the judge.

Goebel said he would and was put on probation.

BLAST IN TUBE CAUSES SCARE

The cover was lifted two feet in the air and fell nearly in its original place. The flame spurted to a height of about eight feet and momentarily filled the intersection with a ghastly glare. Persons near the manhole fled, while others declined to venture near it in fear of further explosions. Smoke arose from several manholes in the vicinity, but no further trouble developed.

Gets Two Months on Assault Charge

Nathan Goldberg, of Wilson st., Mattapan, who aprealed from a fine of $100 imposed on him by Judge Churchill of the Dorchester Municipal Court, for assault on Israel Bernstein, Beacon st. lawyer, went to trial in the Superior Criminal Court and a verdict of guilty was rendered against him.

Judge Butterworth sentenced Goldberg to two months in the House of Correction.

VOTERS WAGING BATTLE IN BAY STATE CITIES

Spirited Primaries Being Held in Beverly and Chelsea; Three Oppose Quigley

Several spirited contests are being waged today at primary elections in a number of Massachusetts cities.

In Malden, Mayor John D. Devir is being opposed for re-nomination by four other candidates, including former Mayor William A. Hastings, who was the chief executive 23 years ago.

Austin H. Roby, who was defeated by Mayor Devir last year by 1000 votes, is also a candidate as well as Frank Simpson and Ernest Butler.

A three-cornered fight for mayor has featured the campaign in Everett. Mayor James A. Roche, seeking re-nomination for a third term is opposed by Michael C. O'Neill, engineer and former teacher, and George W. C. Smith, Everett business man.

There are also contests for the board of aldermen, city council and school committee in Everett.

THREE OPPOSE QUIGLEY

In Chelsea there are four candidates for mayor, including the incumbent, Lawrence F. Quigley, who is seeking a seventh term. Representative Frank D. Crowley, a YD veteran and holder of a distinguished service citation from General Edwards, and Edward W. Isbester, a former sergeant of police, who served a year at Atlanta for complicity in the so-called Chelsea rum-ring, and asks for vindication by the voters.

Two of the four will be nominated for mayor, likewise there will be two persons nominated for each of the 18 places to be filled including nine aldermen and 10 members of the school committee.

Supervisors of election have been appointed by Governor Allen to observe and watch for violations of the election laws. Two supervisors have been appointed for each of the 14 precincts. The Chelsea polls are open from 6 o'clock this morning until 8 tonight. It is expected that there will be over 10,000 votes cast.

FIGHT IN BEVERLY

Chief interest to Beverly voters is a spirited contest for councilmanic. There are three candidates fighting for the one vacancy on the committee. The candidates are Dr. Guy L. Baker, Fred A. Newman and John A. Trout. The other contest is for alderman of Ward 3. The candidates are Timothy J. Hayes, the present incumbent, Philip Maiarelli and Joseph F. Desmond.

Mayor Michael A. Landers is opposed for renomination in Lawrence by former mayor William P. White, who is president of a local real estate operator. A hot campaign has been carried on with Mayor Landers pointing to his record.

Alderman John W. McCarthy, director of engineering, and Peter Carr, director of public safety, are opposed for re-nomination also. Sergeant Daniel F. Kiley, a member of the police force, has been carrying on a spirited campaign against his superior officer, Alderman Carr.

Hearing Friday on Public Utilities

The special commission on the control and conduct of Public Utilities will hold a public hearing in the State House on Friday for members of the General Court and for city and town officials.

The meeting for the members of the Legislature will be held at 10:30 a. m., and that for the municipal officials at 2:30 p. m. If time permits, it is announced, other witnesses who might not have been in a position to attend the last general hearing given, will have an opportunity of being heard.

Dynamite Planted in This Home Garden

The oft-mentioned predicament of sitting on a keg of dynamite is approximated by a much worried Lynn landlord, according to the police of that city.

Thomas Chrunick of Arbor st., appealed to the officers to find the explosive which he has just learned lies buried in some unknown spot.

The police said they advised him to turn his problem over to the man he brought the house from a month ago and who is said to have buried the dynamite.

The matter came to light when a boarder of Chrunick was injured while handling a percussion cap he found in the cellar. Chrunick, police say, went to the former owner of the house to inquire about the dozen caps in the cellar and was told calmly that there was also 15 pounds of dynamite buried in some forgotten spot in the back yard.

If the ex-owner does not find it soon the police will take a hand they said. But not with any sharp-pointed excavating tools, they add —probably with a court warrant, charging keeping explosives without a permit.

VOTERS WAGING BATTLE IN BAY STATE CITIES

Spirited Primaries Being Held in Beverly and Chelsea; Three Oppose Quigley

Several spirited contests are being waged today at primary elections in a number of Massachusetts cities.

In Malden, Mayor John D. Devir is being opposed for re-nomination by four other candidates, including former Mayor William A. Hastings, who was the chief executive 23 years ago.

Austin H. Roby, who was defeated by Mayor Devir last year by 1000 votes, is also a candidate as well as Frank Simpson and Ernest Butler.

A three-cornered fight for mayor has featured the campaign in Everett. Mayor James A. Roche, seeking re-nomination for a third term is opposed by Michael C. O'Neill, engineer and former teacher, and George W. C. Smith, Everett business man.

There are also contests for the board of aldermen, city council and school committee in Everett.

THREE OPPOSE QUIGLEY

In Chelsea there are four candidates for mayor, including the incumbent, Lawrence F. Quigley, who is seeking a seventh term. Representative Frank D. Crowley, a YD veteran and holder of a distinguished service citation from General Edwards, and Edward W. Isbester, a former sergeant of police, who served a year at Atlanta for complicity in the so-called Chelsea rum-ring, and asks for vindication by the voters.

Two of the four will be nominated for mayor, likewise there will be two persons nominated for each of the 18 places to be filled including nine aldermen and 10 members of the school committee.

Supervisors of election have been appointed by Governor Allen to observe and watch for violations of the election laws. Two supervisors have been appointed for each of the 14 precincts. CITY RICHER BY $100,000 IF NO THEATER

Tamworth St. Sold; Theater Must Be Built Within 3-Year Period

The city of Boston stands to make $100,000 if the Boylston-Tremont Corp., purchaser of the 4270 square feet of land in Tamworth st. does not begin construction of a theater seating 1000 on the site within three years.

This was the stipulation inserted by the city Council, when, against the lone objection of Councilor Henry Parkman, Jr., it voted to permit Mayor Nichols to close the deal.

The purchase price is $100,000 and a like sum if a theater is not turned over to the city if the terms of the transfer are not fulfilled.

Councilor Parkman objected to the removal from the agreement of sale a clause providing that the corporation want to erect a building to cost $500,000.

He declared that the purchase price was merely a nominal fee and that the type of building should be named in the agreement so that the city would be assured of a fair return through increased taxation on the proposed development.

WED IN SECRET, GETS DIVORCE

A secret marriage performed while the bridegroom was a student at Tufts College wound up with a decree in the Middlesex Probate Court when Mrs. Mildred E. Lewis obtained a decree from Samuel Clinton Lewis, Jr., for desertion.

The divorce action was uncontested. Mrs. Lewis testified that she was married Sept. 1, 1926. Lewis completed his course April 21, 1928 and was graduated as a civil engineer.

The libellant was given a decree, custody of her child and a weekly allowance by Judge Harris.

COACH FEARS TEAM MAY GO STALE

FEARING that further training after four weeks of continual grind would tend to make his players stale for their battle with Yale, Coach Arnie Horween of Harvard today ordered a day of rest for his players.

The entire varsity squad were transported afrom Cambridge today to the Myopia Hunt Club at Hamilton, where they were scheduled to spend the day and part of the evening.

The Cantabs return late tonight to resume practice in the Stadium tomorrow. At that time they will watch the first of the demonstrations of Yale plays.

For today, however, nothing relating to football other than a short talk by Horween is scheduled. The players are expected to benefit greatly by the rest and change of scenery.

Suspension of practice at this time comes at an opportune moment, for playing conditions on Soldiers Field have become next to impossible. Recent heavy rains have transformed the gridiron from hard turf to a mire with mud ankle deep over the entire surface.

PRACTICE IN CAGE

Weather conditions have forced the Cantabs to hold practice in the Briggs baseball cage. A score of men have been put to work to transform the huge indoor diamond into a playing field closely resembling the Stadium turf.

The cage is large enough to permit three elevens to run through drills with ease, and Horween's men work out under the glass roofed structure much as they would on the regular gridiron.

Continued adverse weather conditions may see the erection of goal posts in the cage in order that the Crimson dropkickers may get in the practice which they need sorely at this time.

Harvard's dropkick specialists have been far off their usual pace for the past two weeks, and lacking practice in this highly specialized art may tell the story against Yale on Satur ay.

Art Huguley will also need plenty of practice before he can hope to punt again as well as he did before sustaining injuries in the Florida tilt. The loss of Joe Potter from the squad increases the seriousness of Harvard kicking problem at this time, as this leaves the booting up to Wood and Huguley.

RICHARDS AT GUARD

When Johnnie Tanner, veteran left guard for Harvard, did not appear in the A team lineup in the last practice held at Cambridge, his place was taken by Richards who, up to this time, has been a relief center for Ben Tickner.

Richards, while drilling for the pivot position is said to work equally well on either flank of center. In fact, it was once thought that he would be made a guard earlier in the year when the question of what to do about the center of the line was giving the Cantab mentors many sleepless nights.

The sub ball passer is reported to be coming along fast and promises to become a valuable double in the line

With approximately a third of Harvard's allotment of tickets for the big game already distributed extra pasteboards were hard to find around Cambridge today.

Speculators, who ordinarily line Massachusetts ave., ready to buy or sell ducats at fancy prices, were conspicuous by their absence.

Janco Wins Bout With Young Lefty

Fall River, Nov. 19—A last-round rally by Henry Janco of Lawrence gave him a decision over Young Lefty of Fall River in the main bout of the show staged by the Fall River A. A. Lefty was out in front for the first three rounds but Janco evened matters down the next three. The seventh was even and the last went to the Lawrence man by a shade.

MR. BOSTON

by JACK CONWAY

"I CAN give the cause for the earthquakes through out New England," volunteered Paul Bowser as he dropped in to hello Mr. Boston today.

"Shoot," chirped the veteran

"Gus Sonnenberg dove into town," said Bowser, laughingly. "He must have hit the ground while executing one of his famous diving tackles. A rough hombre is this Sonnenberg person."

Jack Conway

"Where did Bonaneberg bronco in from?" pressed Mr. Boston.

"The Golden West," answered Bowser. "He joined Strangler Lewis to the mat in a title bout at Los Angeles last Wednesday night. He then started for the Hub. You know Sonny is billed to defend his title against Pat McGill in a finish match, best two falls out of three, at the New Boston Arena on Thursday night."

"Yeah!" piped Mr Boston. "I'll be there provided you will drop a wire cage over the press row You know Sonny almost took my dome off the night he dove through the ropes at the Arena while battling Lewis. If Sonny had been a few inches lower, well, I guess I wouldn't be chatting with you today.

"I think Gus is taking quite a chance in agreeing to meet McGill a few nights after competing such a long hop across the country."

"SONNY never seems to tire," declares Bowser. "He has been the most active athlete in the world during the past year. Since winning the title from Lewis at the Boston Garden last January, he has engaged in over than 60 matches He has traveled to every part of the United States and Canada. He has given wrestling the same kick that Babe Ruth gives to baseball and that Jack Sharkey furnishes to boxing

"How much money has Sonnenberg made this year?" queried Mr. Boston.

"His earnings to date have been around $200,000, which isn't too bad for a young man who used to get a week selling automobiles. Sonny has been in a class by himself as a drawing card."

"I look for McGill to give the champion plenty of opposition Thursday night," went on Mr. Boston "Pat is a finished grappler and is confident he can lick Sonnenberg or any of the other top-notchers. I consider McGill as good a grappler as Lewis or Malcewicz, two of the big shots in the mat game."

"Pat has class and plenty of courage," remarked Bowser. "I'm sure will make Sonny step lively."

"AL LACY called Mr. Boston on the telephone

"I have been talking with Eddie Black at the Garden in regard to a bout between Jack Zeramby and Andy Callahan," declared Lacy. "Zeramby weighed 139 pounds when he resumed training at Toland's Gym after going through a building process at Miller's camp in Maine. Jake will clean up the local lightweight situation."

MR. BOSTON told Johnny Buckley, Callahan's manager, of Lacy's remarks.

"My Andy will chill Zeramby inside of five rounds," said Buckley.

M'KENNEY REBUILDS EAGLES

THOUGH the finish of the season is less than a fortnight away, Coach Joe McKenney of Boston College is still trying to find the best eleven men on his Eagle grid squad.

All through this campaign McKenney has resorted to frequent shifts. Injuries, slumps and improvements to and by his various charges have been the causes for McKenney assuming the role of juggler.

When the B. C. team stepped forth two weeks ago and ran amuck against Fordham, McKenney was sure he had found his best club

But Capt. Paddy Creedon, Joe Mirley, Cheesy Antos and Joe Kelley were ruffled by the Ram and B C. presented a new backfield against Marquette. It failed to function completely and now Joe is back just where he started.

B. C. ATTACK WEAK

Boston College's offense was weak against Marquette, according to the boys themselves. But the line was even better than when it outplayed the gigantic frontier of Mal Cwanaugh's aggregation

McKenney has the job of remodeling his offense so that it will fit in with the renewed frontier

Boston University is B. C.'s next opponent. This one won't be easy but it's almost impossible to see how B. U. can top the Eagles unless they change overnight. Whether McKenney's job is finished against B. U. or not won't matter. But it's success or failure a week from Saturday when B. C. tries to ward off the lances of Holy Cross' hard-riding Crusaders.

After a poor start McKenney whipped his team into fighting trim in just two weeks. The club went out and fought Villanova to a standstill. No B. C man will say B. C. was better than Villanova. It wasn't. But the Eagles had the punch to pull out a tie—a moral victory.

Then came another era of juggling. The Eagles made two more poor showings, even though they were victorious, and snapped to in time to make a gallant battle against Fordham. The team was rank against Marquette and probably won't be much better against B. U.

NO CHANGE IN LINE

There probably won't be any change in the line. That department came to against Fordham and maintained its stride in the West. But the backfield has blown skyhigh and only four of ten eligibles are apt to be assigned starting posts against H. C

H. C. will run down to the final fortnight's work today. They'll be pushed hard for the rest of this week. The B. U. plays will be given a bit of attention, but Jos isn't worrying much about this He wants to get his team gradually worked up for the H. C game, and they'll be halfway to the edge against B. U.

Jack Young has a bruised shoulder, Henry Buckley a bruised ice and Al Barrett a rib. But no one is as it might be. Paddy Creedon has his right leg taped from knee to ankle and Joe Mirley is still limping. These are the injuries in the B. C. camp. All are considered minor ailments and the five athletes will face Holy Cross unless their hurts are aggravated in the meanwhile

B. C. Hockey Issue to Be Settled Tonight

Whether Boston College will have a hockey team this coming winter should be known after a meeting of the Boston College athletic board at the alumni offices tonight.

The B. C. alumni, very much in favor of keeping a team on the runners, is expected to make an offer of financing the hockey team The big guns in the A. A. coffers was the reason for the announcement, more than a month ago, that hockey at B. C. was off the books.

By BILL GRIMES

UNDEFEATED and untied, the Boston Bruins, world's champions, open their home defense of the Stanley Cup tonight against the New York Rangers at the Boston Garden.

Like the real champions they are, the Bruins are already out in front in the race for the American championship. They started off with a hard-earned, but well-deserved victory over the Detroit Cougars and then stepped over a close decision against the Maple Leafs of Toronto.

Bill Grimes

Although the Bruins have been through two tough games, they are with the exception of Dit Clapper, in prime condition for Lester Patrick and his Rangers. Clapper injured his knee against the Maple Leafs, but Trainer Win Green is confident that he will have the big Hastings boy in prime shape this evening.

Manager Art Ross will start his veteran lineup, with Bill Carson at center and Harry Oliver and Perk Galbraith on the wings. He will have Capt. Lionel Hitchman and Eddie Shore on the defense and Tiny Thompson in the nets.

BRUIN DEFENSE STRONG

Although the defense trio has been traveling at mid-season clip, Oliver, Carson and Galbraith have not been clicking up to standard

The first line is composed of seasoned veterans who need time and hard work to round into shape, while the younger second string forwards are able to step out at their prettiest even at this early stage of the race.

As far as scoring is concerned Cooney Weiland, Dutch Gainor and Dit Clapper have been carrying the load for the Bruins thus far. Gainor and Weiland are leading the National League as regards individual scoring, each having corraled a total of five points.

Gainor has caged three goals and been credited with two assists, while Weiland has reversed Gainor's figures. Clapper beat Lorne Chabot twice last Saturday night and slipped over a goal against Percy LeSueur, the Leaf goalie.

Excepting for the absence of Taffy Abel, Manager Lester Patrick will start the same team which opened the season a year ago for the Rangers. He will have the Cook brothers, Bill and Bunny and Frank Boucher on the front line with Ching Johnson and Bourseault on the points and John Ross Roach in goal. The former Stanley cup holders opened the season with a victory over the Montreal Maroons but were held to a tie by Detroit in the second game.

The Rangers have placed their faith in the veterans, they have picked up some clever youngsters. Vip Foster and Goldie Goldsworthy were taken up from the Springfield Indians, of the Canadian League while Quesnville was purchased from the defunct Newark team of the same league.

CAPACITY HOUSE TONIGHT

Foster is a big and ruggy defense man who, in the days of Can-Am League experience, while Goldsworthy is an exceptionally fast skater, a good stick handler and a fine shot. Quesnevilla (pronounced Kentville) is a tireless worker and has the average ability.

The Boston Garden will be packed to capacity tonight. Every reserved seat has been disposed of and the 1500 rush tickets will be gone hours before the first face off.

Due to the fact that the new rules have brought about more scoring, the 16,000 fans who will attend tonight's game will be offered more thrills than was ever produced in hockey games. Under the old code of rules hockey was one of the fastest of all games. Now the pace is killing and puts a premium on speed and quick thinking.

With only one season of big league hockey under his belt, Cooney Weiland is recognized as one of the smartest players in the professional ranks.

BATES FIRST IN COLLEGE RACE

Bates College of Lewiston, Me, won the New England Intercollegiate cross-country race at Franklin Park. Bates runners finished fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth, for a total of 30 points

Harry L. Richardson and Burside Nick, Francis G. Lindsay of the University of Maine team, finished abreast, as they did last year with Victor McNaughton, since graduated, but the judges gave the individual honors to Richardson

Hazen of New Hampshire finished third

Russell E. Jellison of North eastern hurt his ankle at the second mile. He turned on it when about a mile and a quarter from the start and then strained the injury badly so that when he stumbled on the hill he was obliged to retire

Bates had 30 points for the team honor, Maine in second place had runners in first, second, tenth, fifteenth and twenty-fourth places for a total of 82 points.

New Hampshire won the freshman race. Its total score was 57 Bates was second with 67 points but had the satisfaction to know that C. Jordan, a Lewiston collegian, took the individual honors of the race for the first year youths by 100 yards.

Bay State Circuit Banquet on Feb. 5

Springfield, Nov. 19—Secretary Milton Danziger of the Bay State light harness racing circuit announced that the 17th annual New England Horsemen's Day and banquet will take place February 5, at the Hotel Bancroft in Worcester. Frank Kingman, manager of the New England Fair in Worcester, is general chairman of the committee in charge.

Perkins Will Play for B. U. Against B. C.

NO scrimmages will be held for Boston University's football squad before the Boston College game at Fenway Park Saturday.

Coaches Reggie Brown and Ed Robinson refrained from scrimmaging their charges the week preceding the Geneva game with such good results that they will repeat the same procedure this week

The Terriers entered the Geneva contest last Saturday in their best condition of the season and every member of the squad was aching to get into the fray. If B. U. can hold its form until the tilt with the Eagles, the annual game between these ancient rivals shou'l be a thriller.

Cy Perkins who is one of the best all-around ball carriers on the Terrier squad, did not participate in the Geneva game as he was bothered by a strained back. He could have played if necessary but the team went so well that there was no need of risking Perkins, so he was kept out of the lineup in order to be at this best for the final game Saturday.

Boston University's eleven has been an in and outer all season but a good showing against B. C. will go far toward causing past defeats to be forgotten. The Terriers will enter the Eagle game as the underdog, but will not be lacking supporters, at least not of the followers that witnessed the team's reversal of form against Geneva.

The B. U. line displayed its best work of the season both on offense and defense in the last game and is counted on to repeat in the next contest.

The playing of Jimmie Dincolo and Joe Barrett was responsible for the improved showing of the Terrier forward wall. The shift in positions by these two players has improved their individual games and caused the whole line to function as a unit instead of seven individuals. Dincolo has been shifted from right guard to center on offense, while he continues to play guard on defense.

This move was made because of Barrett's erratic passing as snapper-back, yet he is so good in backing up the line as roving center that the coaches decided to split the duties of these two positions between the boys to get the best results.

The Geneva game proved the wisdom of this move as Dincolo proved especially effective in the middle of the line where he is right at home and broke up play after play before it got by the line of scrimmage. Barrett was immense on defense and broke up four passes and intercepted one. One of his saves was of a Geneva pass behind the B. U. goal line which looked like a certain touchdown.

Tufts Soccer Eleven Plays at Tech Today

Tufts soccer team, newly formed this year, will go after its second victory in as many starts when it meets the Technology team this afternoon at Tech.

The Jumbo booters, led by Wally Mendes, pigeon-coach, expect to give the Engineers a struggle. Zapolsky, center half, and Mottis, player-manager, are the big guns of the Tufts attack in addition to Mendes.

Coast Eleven to Select Opponent for 'Rose' Battle

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 19 (INS) The Western University, chosen by the tournament of roses for theannual East versus West football classic at Pasadena, will in turn select its Eastern rival.

Announcement to this effect was made today by tournament of roses officials. Although University of California is regarded as the probable Western choice, no invitation will be issued until after Saturday. St. Mary's is the only other Western team with a chance.

Pittsburgh, Notre Dame, Purdue, Tennessee and Tulane are all considered in the running for invitation to represent the East.

E. B.-S. B. GRID CONTEST OFF

The East Boston high-South Boston high grid game, scheduled for this afternoon at Braves Field, has been postponed on account of wet grounds. The game is to be played Thursday at Brookline Field at 2.30.

Tomorrow afternoon Trade school plays Memorial at 1 o'clock at Braves Field, Charlestown and Brighton clash tomorrow afternoon at the Wigwam at 2.30.

Earthquake Puts Harvard Golfer in Hole-in-One Club

James Cash, Jr., of Omaha, Neb., a freshman student at Harvard Law chool, got a hole-in-one at the Belmont Spring Golf Club as a result of the earthquake.

Cash, playing in a foursome, teed off from the 16th hole and his ball landed on the green, rolling toward the cup.

The foursome could see the ball resting on the lip of the cup after it had stopped, but when they got to the green Cash's pill was in the dipper. The ear tremor had knocked it in.

McGill Protests Burbank as Title Bout Referee

HEARS HE MAY GIVE BREAK TO SONNY

PAT McGILL, Wakefield Irishman, trained at Toland's Gymnasium before a capacity crowd in preparation for his finish match with Gus Sonnenberg for the heavyweight championship of the world at the Arena Thursday night.

The big Irishman has objected strenuously against Leon Burbank regular local referee and declared that Burbank was not the logical man to referee the match. McGill has been only a step away from the title for the past three years and now, with a glorious opportunity before him he wants a word or say about the selection of the official.

Burbank has refereed altogether too many of Sonnenberg's matches, said McGill. "I'm looking for an even break on this thing because the wrestling title means something like $200,000 a year. Let them pick anybody else, but I have as much to say about the referee as Sonnenberg and I won't permit Burbank to officiate."

The question of referee will probably be decided today or tomorrow. Sonnenberg will be in Worcester tonight, where he is to wrestle Bob Wilkie.

McGILL worked out with Al Thomas and young Ed George of the University of Michigan at Toland's, and he will wind up his heavy training there this afternoon with another hour session.

The match will probably draw a capacity crowd to the Arena, for interest in the return of Sonnenberg is at fever pitch.

Paul Bowser has completed his preliminary card which should be one of the finest cards ever seen in Boston. The popular Joe Malewicz, Utica Panther will make his first start of the year in the semi-final match with rugged Joe DeVito of Providence and in the opening bouts, Henri Duclaine of France will meet Harry Mammut of Springfield, Ed George of the University of Michigan will tackle Evan Ludlow of Russia and Freddy Meyers of Chicago will face Mike Nazarian of the South End.

FOGARTY WILL CALL SIGNALS

Providence, R. I., Nov. 19—With only the New Hampshire game remaining before Brown meets Colgate on Thanksgiving Day, the Bruin started serious work for the meeting with the Maroon team today.

McLaughry and his aides rate the Colgate machine on a par with anything that Brown has faced this season and that includes Princeton, Yale, Syracuse, Dartmouth and Holy Cross.

Link Fogarty, a veteran halfback of two years standing, got his first trial at quarterback in Saturday's game with Norwich. He came through the test with flying colors and will be held in the post this week and will probably call the signals for the Colgate game, even though Gurll does return to the eleven.

Fogarty is the most experienced of the backs who will return next year, and McLaughry is trying to fit him with a view to lining up his team for next year.

Several of the veterans who did not see service in the Norwich game, returned to the squad today and went through their first drill since the Dartmouth game.

Indications pointed to the use of most of the regulars in the New Hampshire game, for the Wildcats always give Brown an interesting afternoon, and this will be the final chance for a check up of the team that will meet the big Colgate machine on Turkey Day morning.

Waite Hoyt Makes Hit at Theaters

Waite Hoyt, an ace on the Yankee pitching staff who helped the New York American League club to win several world championships, showed that he has accomplishments other than of baffling batsmen.

He opened a week's engagement as an entertainer at the Old Howard and Bowdoin Square Theaters and his new adventure went over well.

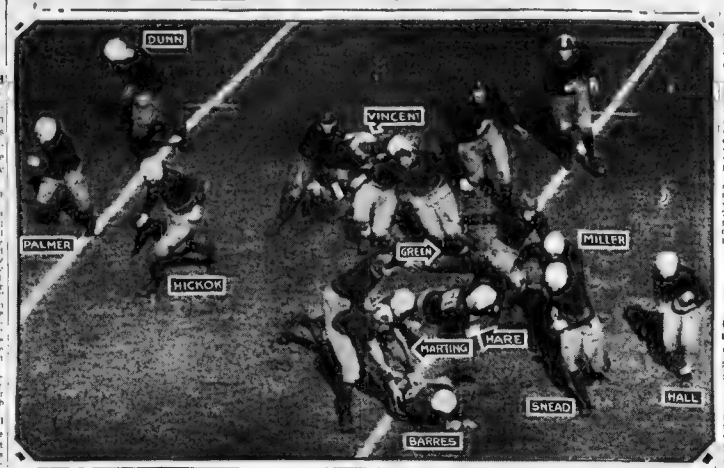
BLUE SATURDAY IF HARVARD CAN'T STOP THIS



This Associated Press photo shows how the Yale offense worked against the Tigers. Every Blue player is shown carrying out his assignment perfectly. The Princeton end and linemen on the right side have been taken out, and Hall is circling the end with a clear field. The Elis from the other side have cut through and are whirling down to take care of the secondaries. On this play Hall made 20 yards before he was forced offside. Yale's interference worked splendidly after the Princeton regulars had been pounded groggy in a fierce first half.

SHAMUS TO BE FIT FOR BOUT

With each principal predicting a knockout finish, more thrills than have been accorded Hub boxing fans in many months are certain to be manufactured when X O Christner of Akron, O., steps into the ring against Dynamite Jim Maloney of South Boston at the Boston Garden Friday night, and followers of the fistic game no doubt will see a faster and more crushing puncher when Maloney chums between the ropes than ever before.

For the South Boston man hasn't taken kindly to remarks that have been dropped in fistic circles since this match was first clinched and he's out to show Hub fans that he is capable of stopping this crushing puncher from the West.

And while Maloney has been tapping the beam over the 204-pound mark in recent ring contests, it is almost certain that he will be close to 185 pounds for this important ring test. And any time the South Boston man trains so diligently that he weighs around 185 pounds, he's dangerous for any heavyweight in the business.

Like many other heavyweights, Maloney sidesteps hard training any time it's possible, but in preparation for this bout, he has worked like a Trojan.

Passes, Punts and Fumbles

DURING the past few years Yale has been credited with developing a new star ball carrier every time it loses a No. 4 back.

Caldwell was the big shot at New Haven for a time. Then he was injured and Johnny Garvey went into the Yale backfield and out-Caldwelled Caldwell. When Garvey came up lame Hammersley, a third-string sub during Caldwell's reign jumped in and featured.

Albie Booth has caused more country-wide comment than has been given to any year back since the days of Ted Coy. Albie was on the sidelines during the Princeton game and Don McLennan was the shining star.

Isn't it about time that the critics came to the conclusion that it is the offense at Yale and not so much the players that is entitled to the credit?

Although Fordham has not been defeated this season, Major Cavanaugh is not getting any thrill out of looking forward to the coming Bucknell game. Carl Snavely has developed a great team at Bucknell, one which has defeated Lafayette, Temple, Villanova and Penn State, losing only to Wash. & Jeff.

More than 25 college games have been lost or ended in ties because of the failure to kick goals after touchdowns this season.

HARMON ASKED TO RESIGN

Chicago Nov. 19 (AP)—The Herald and Examiner said today that Patrick T. (Paddy) Harmon had been asked to resign the presidency of the Chicago Stadium Corp., which owns the $5,000,000 Sports and Exhibition Arena here.

The request was made by the executive committee, the newspaper said, with the explanation that "a change of presidents will be beneficial to the stockholders."

Harmon would not discuss the matter.

International Loop Fails to Name 'Prexy'

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP)—The International Baseball League will have to get along without a president for an other three weeks at least, perhaps longer.

Meeting here yesterday, league [illegible] found themselves deadlocked over whether Jack Hendricks, former manager of the Cincinnati Reds or William L. Dill, New Jersey commissioner of motor vehicles, should succeed to the office. Each was given four of the eight votes [illegible] necessary to elect.

Eventually the league decided to adjourn and for once more the [illegible] league meeting a week [illegible] Penn December [illegible]

In the meantime the [illegible] of Toledo will be looked after by Charles H. Knapp chairman of the board.

The 1930 season will open April 16 and close Sunday, September 21, with each club playing 168 games as usual. The opening day schedule will find Buffalo at Newark, Toronto at Jersey City, Rochester at Baltimore and Montreal at Jersey City.

The league voted to uphold Commissioner Landis' decision in the Southworth manager and coach of Toledo's second baseman of the Rochester Red wings in their [illegible] the series penalties in connection for their part in the disturbance at the last game of the Little World Series. Toledo was suspended for one year and fined $200. Southworth was fined $500.

Schoolboy Notes

SOMERVILLE high, which played no game last Saturday, is looking for a practice game, to be played this week. Faculty Manager Alberto and Coach Dickerman are also going for a bit of some sort so that the Somerville gridders won't go back from lack of work before the big Thanksgiving Day clash with Rindge Tech.

Somerville had a game booked for last Saturday with Salem Trade but when the real status of that team was revealed Somerville cancelled the game. If Somerville is not able to play before the Rindge Tech tilt, it will mean that the team goes into action after a layoff of nearly three weeks.

That fine unscored on eleven of Plymouth high completes its regular schedule when it plays at Middleboro high on Saturday. Plymouth wants to keep its record clean in the Middleboro game, and has a good chance to come through.

Plymouth high has permission to play a Thanksgiving Day game however, and wants to arrange a tilt for one week from. That was the grid credit to be piled up by Plymouth. The Plymouth athletic authorities will be glad to hear from any school interested in a game.

That football meet tomorrow and Thursday at Roxbury Latin school, should produce a lot of fine performances. Kicking, running with the ball and passing, both for distance and accuracy, are the events listed. Belmont Hill school, Browne and Nichols, Country Day, Rivers school, Roxbury Latin and Derby Academy are expected to send their stars to the meet. The private schools had a fleet of fine teams this season so the competition will be close.

St. Anselm's eleven comes to Worcester Saturday for its big game of the year, with St. John's Prep. Having defeated Bridgton Academy and Samuel Johnson Academy of Connecticut St. John's has a good team on the prep school scene. Great power was shown by St. Johns in its two big wins, and St. Anselms will have a difficult time in the Danvers war.

The Catholic High School League race is not settled yet. Immaculate Conception high of Revere is at the top of the league standing. St. Mary's high of Brookline and Mission Church high of Roxbury are tied in second place. St. Clement's of Somerville trails these teams.

Mission Church high plays St. Clement's at Somerville on Sunday. St. Clement's wants to win this one, and go into the league finale with St. Mary's at Somerville on Thanksgiving, with a chance to battle out of the cellar position of the league.

Connie Maloney has been the star of the St. Mary's high team this year. He weighs 165 pounds, is a natural football player, and does a fine job for Bernie Kilroy's team. Maloney plays tackle on defense and moves into the backfield when his team has the ball.

Captain Kenney, Tommy Griffen, Roger Haley and John Welch are the other boys on the St. Mary's high team whose work has been outstanding.

Chelsea high plays at Winthrop on Saturday. That game should give the North Shore fans something in the way of entertainment. Chelsea has come along rapidly, and right now is one of the best teams on the North Shore.

Bill Broderick's Salem eleven rests this week. The team is one of the several splendid school elevens which have not lost any games this year. It probably will not be possible to arrange playoff games between the undefeated teams, as the season of 1929 is likely to have more than one Eastern Massachusetts "champ." Salem should be one of these.

BOOTH ABSENT FROM LECTURE

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 19 (AP)—Driven indoors yesterday by a steady rain, the Yale varsity today was to take the field for a long practice in preparation for its final game of the season Saturday against Harvard at Cambridge.

Little Albie Booth, whose play was missed in the Princeton encounter when he sat on the sidelines nursing a "charleyhorse," was to be out for practice but the afternoon after a rest of two days in the infirmary to give his ailment a chance to clear.

Although Head Coach Mal Stevens refused to say what his plans were, it was believed that he would confine the varsity's practice to signal drill, forward pass drill and defensive work against Crimson plays. All regulars, with the exception of Booth, were on hand yesterday for the blackboard talk given by the coach.

'STRIB' LOSES BOUT ON FOUL

London, Nov. 19 (AP) William J. (Young) Stribling of Macon Ga., suffered his first setback since he finished out with defeat. The Macon, Ga., heavyweight, lost on a foul to Primo Carnera, huge Venetian carpenter, in the fourth round of what was to have been a 15-round encounter. The bout was held in Royal Albert Hall last night.

Eight thousand fans, including the Prince of Wales, attended and were rewarded with some spectacular milling.

Stribling amazed the crowd with his skilful work in the first two rounds, when he evaded all of the giant Italian's wild swings and gave Carnera a bad beating about the body.

In the third round Stribling cracked the Italian on the jaw and Carnera went down for a count of six. He got up however and in a wild fury floored Stribling for a count of nine. The American was dazed but gamely got up and succeeded in holding his rival at bay for the rest of the round.

Terriers to Have Veteran Sextet

Boston University hockey team will undertake one of the most strenuous schedules of recent years this winter when it meets Yale, Dartmouth, Princeton, Brown, Harvard, University Club, New Hampshire and Williams, in addition to tentative contests with Tech, Boston College, Bowdoin, B. A. A. and Northeastern. Two games each with Harvard, University Club and Dartmouth will be played, while Yale and Princeton will be met only once.

The only men lost to the team are Capt. Bill Gibson, who was graduated last February; Snow, a underunity, and Goalie Sid Silberberg. Gibson's berth will be taken over by Buck Bergholz, regular center last winter, while Burt Grodberg will defend the net. Dick Lou hard has been shifted to center from wing with Ben Currier, Jos. Holmes, Whitmore, Sawyer, Corcoran, flanking him. The veteran, Bob Elliott, at defense rounds out the sextet.

SALEM TEAM ON MEDFORD GRID SLATE

RALPH L. KENDALL, Faculty Manager of Athletics at Medford High school, today announced that Salem high will take the place of Everett high on the football and basketball schedules of Medford for the next year.

The withdrawal of Everett High has been in the air for some time, as attempts of the management between Everett and Medford to arrange the annual game between the schools on Turkey Day have been unsuccessful.

Following the announcement of the above mentioned concerning, a hot argument between coaches of the teams, which finally resulted in a demand that Henry Gillen, Everett coach be tendered an apology by Medford authorities for alleged remarks.

Medford replied to that demand by severing athletic relations with Everett High.

Another new opponent for Medford High will be the Pine and Cone outfit for next Fall. Dropping the Everett game leaves the Medford schedule for the football season as follows:

Sept. 28—Wakefield at Medford.
Oct. 5—Brockton at Brockton.
Oct. 12—Lynn English at Medford.
Oct. 19—Somerville at Somerville.
Oct. 26—Haverhill at Medford.
Nov. 2—Salem at Salem.
Nov. 9—Newton at Medford.
Nov. 16—Malden at Medford.
Nov. 23—Quincy at Medford.
Nov. 28—Melrose at Melrose.

H.C. MUST BUILD UP OFFENSE

Worcester, Nov. 19—Rain cancelled the usual Monday afternoon scrimmage drill for Holy Cross in preparation for the game with Springfield on Saturday.

The squad was given a long talk instead on the mistakes made against Harvard.

In spite of the hard game with Harvard, Holy Cross came out without any serious injuries. Sweeney who was helped off the field will be ready for the B. C. game, College says.

Texas Coach Killed While Hunting

Kerrville, Texas, Nov. 18 (AP)—E. J. (Doc) Stanley, former football and basketball coach at the University of Texas, was killed accidentally near here today when J. W. O'Brien, San Antonio hunting companion, aimed at a deer and shot the veteran mentor. A coroner's jury of accidental death was impaneled.

Stanley, who is believed to have coached more football players than any other coach in Texas were those at Clemson college, South Carolina, Oregon Aggies, and Nebraska university.

Fighting Card for St. Joe's Tourney

Another smashing card of bouts will be presented in Mechanics Building, Saturday night, when St. Joseph's A. A. will stage another in its series of amateur tournaments.

The opposing champions in the big Golden Glove tournament looming up before them, are turning out in record numbers for the St. Joe's tourneys. Last Saturday night, more than 40 boxers competed, and a crowd of 3500 saw a thrilling battle. This week's show will probably equal that record, not only in the number of entrants but also in the attendance record.

Bouts are to be held in the 118, 125 and 145 pounds classes for novices, and in the 128, 160 pounds and heavyweight divisions for all comers.

This Day in Our History

JAMES A. GARFIELD, twentieth President of the United States, was born in Orange, Cuyahoga County, Ohio, on November 19, 1831. He died in September, 1881, during his presidential term, from an assassin's bullet. He was succeeded by Arthur.

SILK STOCKINGS ARE GREAT ASSET OF BEAUTY

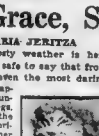
By MARIA JERITZA

BRR! Frosty weather is here and it is safe to say that from now on not even the most daring flapper will appear with unstockinged legs, except in the warmth and privacy of her home. On the contrary, stockinged limbs peep out demurely from longish skirts. But it is just as important as ever that legs should be symmetrical and create the illusion of loveliness.



Maria Jeritza

Dark stockings of the autumn mode, blending either with the costume in daytime or the complexion in the evening, tend to make the limbs look slender. Another tremendous aid to your beauty is the new fitted hosiery designed especially for various types of legs slender or plump, tiny or ankle or high of instep. These stockings should prove a great comfort and help to smooth out all that clumsy, wrinkled effect over the ankles.

Men loathe seeing a woman with twisted stocking seams, and as a matter of fact nothing is dowdier. A properly adjusted garter girdle with two pairs of elastic garters should keep stockings well pulled up and free from wrinkles. Be sure to select a girdle that fits well, else your stockings will drag it down and it will be of little service.

Girls who are athletic usually have trim, well-developed legs and calves. But the woman who takes most of her exercise at a typewriter or standing back of a counter needs systematic gymnastics designed to bring all the muscles of her feet, ankles and limbs into play. Of course sports such as swimming, rowing and dancing are the best of all for the purpose of keeping the legs symmetrical. But exercises like the following are excellent when practiced every day.

Hold your back and neck straight, your hands on your hips, fingers to the back and goose-step. You will look funny, but the exercise will tend to banish superfluous fat cells and strengthen the muscles of your knees, thighs and lower back if you practice it energetically and faithfully.

Hold your ankle bone stiff and firm and lift your foot just as high as you can. Then lift the other foot in the same manner. Stand still before your mirror in low while you goose-step, or if you prefer, march about your room until you feel tired, taking care always to keep your legs rigid and your toes pointed straight ahead on the floor. straight to the ceiling when your leg is lifted. The best place to practice the goose-step is out doors, if you have privacy. Before long, your lungs will be flooded with fresh air, your muscles, well limbered, and you will find yourself laughing at the absurdity of the exercise.

A bath and rub-down should conclude your practice. For the rub-down, I suggest a mixture in equal parts, of spirits of camphor and massage alcohol. Rubbing the lotion well into your knees, ankles, the soles of your feet and between your toes.

Now is the time to get your legs into symmetrical shape for your dancing this winter and also free from all defects and skin blemishes so that they will look lovely next season when you wear your bathing suit or stockingless sports costume.

Pat Finds It's Not Guy Who Crashed

"Guy, not you!" she moaned in wild relief. "Pat, dear, you are as white as a ghost," he cried.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I OFTEN wonder what would happen to Mrs. Jake Wood if she had to get out and hustle for a living. I wonder how often she'd have to be scanned before she'd head for a job and snap into some sort of adequate performance.

But, of course, she doesn't have to hustle . . . and no one can ever be sure of a mother. And she can get by with murder, if she pleases. Which she often does.

Elsie Robinson

N o w , of course, there's nothing against motherhood, per se. Joyously and intelligently performed, it's the finest job on earth and a mother deserves honor. But I put it up to you . . . how many mothers do you know who perform joyously and intelligently . . . and how many act as if they had the pip?

Mrs. Jake Wood is NOT a joyous mother. Life is one long moan n' mumble, wheeze n' whine for this lady. She firmly believes that she made the supreme sacrifice when she married Jake and thought little children into the world. And ever since she has used Maternity, much as a bandit uses a length of gas pipe to gain her own way at all times regardless of the rights or desires of those around her.

Judged by ordinary industrial standards, Mrs. Wood's performance is a fine one. Fair and intelligent letters or sell notions any better than she raised kids, she'd be fired in a day. And judged by ordinary human standards, Mrs. Wood herself is a lazy, stupid, selfish, sulky nonentity. But Mrs. Wood would be outraged if you applied these tests to her or her service. Is she not a mother? She is. Therefore, with the advent of motherhood she was automatically sanctified and endowed with all wisdom and righteousness.

Am I kidding? I am not. That is exactly the way most mothers used to think about themselves two generations ago. Many of them still continue to think that way, but, fortunately, their number is diminishing. The modern young woman no longer believes that she's a mother by divine right. She realizes that motherhood is merely a biological result and it's up to her to get busy and learn her job. But there are still Mrs. Jake Woods—plenty of 'em.

Ernest Boyd, the Irish essayist, has given them some mean publicity in the August issue of Harper's Magazine.

"MATERNITY," says Mr. Boyd, "HAS LONG BEEN THE TRUMP CARD OF FEMALE SELFISHNESS . . . every conceivable form of egotism has been committed in the name of motherhood. It has served as a device for compelling marriage; it has been a form of torture to the father whose more sensitive nervous system could not endure the thought of its pains; it was a condition which notoriously reduced the sentimental male to abject surrender . . . it has proved a valuable investment for alimony . . . As a chain with which to rivet lives together when domestic conditions are impossible, it still remains the most ingenious of all the manifold inventions employed by female selfishness . . . SO LONG AS A WOMAN HAS A CHILD, SHE STILL HAS A CARD TO PLAY, WHATEVER THE CHILD'S AGE OR ITS SENTIMENTS TOWARD HER."

Fair and intelligent mothers will like Mr. Boyd's article, but it will make the Mrs. Jake Woods mad as hops, and that's good. It's time someone showed up Mrs. Jake Woods and made her act human.

Hurry, Health Success

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M. D., Ph. D. Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

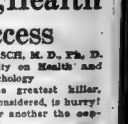
In one way or another the continuous hurry that pervades American life is spreading its pernicious effects and is undermining the joy of living, work, happiness and health.

When you hurry at your work you accomplish nothing. You think you are making great strides, but instead you are falling into slipshod ways, and lowering your efficiency.



Dr. L. E. Bisch

When you hurry at your meals, hurry home and then hurry out again, when you take your recreations and pleasures with the same amount of hurry that you rush through the day on, the happiness that life may afford you is blighted.

When you hurry, your mind and body are held at a fever pitch of excitement. You don't digest and assimilate your food properly, your heart beat is increased, your organs do not get a chance for rest and repair, you are constantly in a state of simmering and boiling that puts too great a strain upon your system.

Unfortunately, too, when once the habit of hurry has gripped you, it is exceedingly difficult to shake it off.

You dream about hurry. That is, your dreams are confused and jumbled and you see yourself rushing hither and yon in the same way you do during the day.

In the mornings you are tired because your brain has been overactive. You start the day handicapped.

Then, when you hurry and find that you are not accomplishing what you set out to do, you begin to worry. And everyone knows that worry cuts short life like a germ disease.

By this I do not mean to suggest that you should become lazy and indifferent.

Do try, however, to direct the energy you waste in hurry into purposeful, useful and definite channels and thereby the every ounce of your vital output may yield a maximum return.

Figure out in advance how much speed will accomplish the greatest possible amount of good. Too little is as bad as too much. But there is just the correct amount. Learn to be the master that you would decide how fast your average auto speed should be for a 1000-mile trip, everything considered mileage, wear and tear, gas consumption, etc.—so determine also how much speed you should expend for the journey through life.

Simple Home Wedding

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—I am planning to have a simple home wedding. Do I engage the minister, or is the groom supposed to pay for this?

2—Would it be correct for me to wear the clothes I intend to wear on our trip, to be married in? Say a dark brown dress, coat and hat?

3—However, if I should be married at home, should I make an appointment with our minister and take care of the cost in advance?

4—Would it be correct to have his mother and my mother as our only attendants?

AN EVERY-DAY READER.

YOU go to see the minister—with your mother, perhaps—and arrange both the ceremony and the fee for performing the ceremony.

3—No. Again it would be correct that you leave the clergyman, and the groom gives him the fee, after the ceremony.

4—Yes.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper to present a pianist (accompanying singers in an operetta) with flowers?

GRATEFUL.

YES. Flowers are always appropriate messengers of our expression of appreciation and friendliness.

The Truth

ABOUT PEACE

By ELINOR GLYN

IT will be several week before you read this, girls, but I do hope when it was printed, that you read and understood Mr. Hearst's splendid manifesto in regard to the Ramsay McDonald visit.

It was a glorious document. For peace should be the aim of the world, and our two countries in particular should be friends.

Elinor Glyn

People, always wary ignorant themselves, who influence public opinion by suggestions which wound the self esteem of the two nations.

And it is all this feeling I hope to break down, at least between you and me, girls. If I can, with my experience of a long life and of the old, old nation I belong to, help you in any way to be happier, finer, more cultured and polished, then I shall be happy.

I shall feel that whatever gift I have of writing has not been in vain.

For America is the spirit of youth, of generosity, of freedom. If I were an American I should feel so proud that I would pledge myself never to do one single thing that could tarnish the flag.

That is what I feel about the old Union Jack and that is what I want you to feel about your young "Star Spangled Banner. Excelsior —Always' laugh: "You love me, Pat?"

"Yes."

"But, Pat, do you really love me so?"

"More."

"But you had to fear me dead before you knew you cared?"

"I've known. But . did not know how terrible—how desolate you'd be. And if you should not care for me, Guy . . . ."

"I do—Pat, you cannot love me more than I love you—want me more. You cannot. Oh—little Pat—"

She said pertly: "Ah, but if you really cared, would you be driving me home now to go flaunting off with another?

"You dare not flaunt with another, Pat. Have I not marked you mine? There's no escape for you in this world or another. Be sure you do not change."

"No—I will not. Be equally sure for yourself."

"Then you can tea with a thousand of them, Pat, till the tesing days are over and you come home to ME."

For the next two weeks a certain dark, ambitious young man worked flamingly. The world was his, so he thought, if he'd but put a pair of patient hands forth and reach for it. He WOULD! He saw dear, frantic eyes looking into his felt soft arms clinging to his neck and lips crazy with relief, sobbing

"NOT YOU—Guy not you!"

One afternoon he went into Bryce's office with some beautiful sketches.

Two or three women were crossing the outer office. They walked rich state mark off a few days punishment and do this Christly sweetness to a dining child?

Nancy Brack raised an eyebrow and smirked

"If pheonix! They've got Tom Bag a' parole set for the middle of January. Want him," pointing to the inner office, "to use pressure with the governor and get him off for Christmas? Want us to give him the job back? Fat chance!"

Bryce was in truculent mood. He waved back and forth before speaking to Guy. He gave one swift glance at the sketches and waved them aside.

"Isn't it enough," he flung, "that he gets off with a six months' sentence for attempted murder?"

"But Christmas time," said Guy, instantly disturbed with the memory of a face—a white little kid's face beaming with joy as the tiny model airplane was given him. "Guess the little fellow wants him home for Christmas."

Bryce champed at his mustache. Finally he came up to Guy. "That day he was in here, Burns cursed me. Hoped I'd live to see the day my grandson was gasping for breath; hoped I'd see his wasting in a living death and all my money squandered to save him.

"That's what he wishes me. Why, I never harmed him . . . Only advanced him hundreds of dollars I knew he couldn't pay.

"The DOG! Let him rot. Fiend that wishes agony to another man's child because his has suffered. No! Let him rot!"

Tom Burns was to be paroled on January 11.

The paper urged that the prisoner be released, that he be given a chance to see his son alive. In this season of goodwill cannot this

'Small Can' Recipes

IT'S so often difficult to cook for two people, that such a larger one, sometimes finds itself eating a monotonous of foods, which, though they are good foods of themselves, are unappetizing because of their sameness.

The way for this family that manufacturers have evolved the ounce can of food, which is simmering, lovers, and which may be purchased for a luncheon or small family dinner, is a welcome one. It is every assurance that the food is just as standard in quality as that packed in the large cans. These small cans are excellent for the larger family, for instance, if several small cans of fruit are purchased, say, peaches, pears and pineapple, instead of one large can of just one fruit, each member of the family can have the fruit he likes best.

Martha Lee

Here is a delicious new recipe which may be made with the help of the new 8-ounce can of food and which will serve two people generously or three or four people rather scantily.

MEAT AND CARROT PIE

Cut ½ lb. of round steak in 1 cubes and sear well in a skillet. Add the liquor from one 8-ounce can of carrots and enough water to cover well and simmer gently until tender. When half done, add 1 sliced onion, ½ tsp. dried green pepper and ½ cup celery. Add more liquid if too much cooks away, as there should be plenty of gravy. Brown together 1½ tbsps. bacon fat and 1½ tbsps. flour and add to thicken the mixture. Add 2-3 tsps. salt, ¼ tsp. kitchen bouquet, and the carrots. Pour into a casserole or baking dish and cover with a crust of baking powder biscuit dough. Bake 30 minutes in a hot oven, 450°. Serves 4.

Faithfully yours
MARTHA LEE.

Three Minute Journeys

By TEMPLE MANNING

IN my last article I told you something about Irkutsk, the metropolis of eastern Siberia. Today, I want to talk about another part of Siberia—the part where the wild steppe abounds in natural beauty.

Let me say, first, that the Altai range is fairly in Mongolia, extending east and west just below the Mongolia-Siberia border line. But the whole western end of the range crosses the Siberian line where it dips sharply south, and it is in this part of the mountains with which I shall deal today.

A trip into the Altai foothills should preferably start at Novo-Nikolaevsk where the Trans-Siberian railroad crosses the Obi River. Here one boards a steamer for the trip up the river to Bisk.

It is a solitary trip, for the Obi at this point receives but little traffic. Every now and again the boat will stop at one of three little hamlets along the bank. These, generally, are situated at the point where some tributary river enters the Obi. Inside, mid-summer they are literally overflowing with flowers of every possible description and color.

Whenever a boat comes in the peasants flock to the dock. Curiosity, at least, is universal. The men are stalwart, but the women pleasant looking, although by no means pretty. The colored flannel shirts of the men and the bright skirts and head shawls of the women are in sharp contrast to the drab colorings of the steppe which it stepped which stretch out beyond it.

Bilsk is a center of some importance. It is the town to which is brought all the butter produced in the vast pasture land around about. Bisk, also, is collecting lumber cut in the foothills of the Altais.

If one would go into the Altai country one must forsake the comfort of the boat and adopt the older form of transportation, the horse-drawn tarantass. This two-wheeled wagon will seat four persons as it jolts and creaks its way across the rough road.

To get well into the Altai mountains is a difficult feat and one must be prepared for mountaineering. However, one may get well into the foothills without leaving "civilization." The path or road leads through some of the . . t gorgeous valleys ever hills one could imagine. Little grass-roofed wooden huts, these towns can be compared with nothing that one will see elsewhere.

Do You Know That—

The choir stalls of Westminster Abbey have been painted to restore the red, gold and blue brilliance which was theirs in the Middle Ages. An anonymous gift made the renovation possible.

Sideshows have been barred from the Fre...ch Exposition to be held in 1931 and there will be no "Midway" attractions. But the management promises that the whole exposition will be handled in an entertaining form.

A painting depicting "An Indian Group Surrounding a Medicine Man" on the upper Missouri was unveiled when Prof. Theodore Klaas of Munster cleaned what seemed a worthless piece of canvas. It is the work of the Swiss artist Bodmer who accompanied Prince Maximilian of Wied in 1832-4 on an expedition to the upper Missouri.

A German scientific expedition recently returned from the Malay peninsular reported the finding of an island which had two languages, one reserved for the use of men in discussing affairs of state and the other for the use of women's daily gossip.

Keeping Children Quiet at Bedtime

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

A GOOD many parents fail to connect the fact that children have had too boisterous a romp just before going to bed with the fact that sleep has been slow in coming, and that even then it has been a jerky, unrestful sleep.

A mother said: "But Joan is such an energetic, sturdy child—she plays so hard all day long that you'd think she'd drop off to sleep the minute her head hits the pillow. But she doesn't."

Of course she doesn't. There is such a thing as getting so tired you CAN'T sleep. You've been through that, and so have I, and so children can suffer from too prolonged activity.

In one of the nursery schools where sleep is carefully observed it has seemed to work out that the slow, easy-going children who never get fearfully excited or engrossed or energetic in play sleep the best. So it behooves us to be a little careful in guiding the play of the "peppy" youngsters. It is well to slow down the quick child, to insist upon an afternoon nap, even when the child has outgrown the stage of naps, or at least see that he sits quietly and plays at something which does not excite him nor call for an unusual ouput of energy.

I think the very little folk suffer most just before bedtime. Perhaps it is because Daddy is at home, and he gets so little chance to play with the two or three-year-old that his play is intensive, and at a time when play should be almost over for the day. It is a temptation to indulge in a good romp and hear the squeaks and squeals of childish laughter. But it is a temptation which should be put aside in favor of a quiet game.

Little people like to manipulate dominoes or checkers, even though they have no idea as to the games these pieces involve. Daddy can help work out pretty designs with the red and black round disks, or build houses with the dominoes. Or, if the child is old enough to enjoy stories, he will love climbing into Daddy's lap and hearing a quiet tale of some sort or other, one which is never exciting nor unduly stimulating.

Then the child is calmed down, relaxed and ready to go to sleep. But after a heated chase, or tossing in the air, or excited screaming and laughing, it takes a long time to get ready to woo sleep.

Even the older children, children of school age, shouldn't be allowed a game of indoor tag or an impromptu wrestling match just at bedtime. It is too stimulating and not for the troubled sleep, and a sleep which doesn't give them the proper rest and growth.

The period just before sleepy time should be a quiet and a HAPPY one. I like to see mothers take time enough for a little talk with the child, about all the nice things which have happened during the day. Mistakes and upsets which have occurred during the day should have been discussed the MOMENT they happened, not hoarded up until bedtime. A brief, "We're going to do better tomorrow about being on time," or obeying or whatever the lapse concerned, is enough.

Read the child to dreamland with happy thoughts, and make him save his wild romp...gs for daylight hours, far removed from the slumber period.

Wants More Attention

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A GIRL should listen to good sense as well as the intuitions of her heart when it comes to deciding what one will marry. But it is not always easy to do so. This is the situation in which Patsy finds herself:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going out steadily with a fellow for almost a year and a half I love him very much, but he doesn't treat me right.

He is always in the movies or and always talks marriage, but he calls me up just when he feels like it and when I see him it isn't early—it's always late at night.

Every week-end he goes out of town for the day. He says he goes to see his mother. When I ask him not to go so often and say it a...no mother should be given to any...sigue and he says I am accusing him of things. He doesn't want me to go out with any other fellow. If I break up with him, do you think I can forget him?

A few weeks ago I met a very fine fellow and he asked me for steady company. I think he's very nice, although he drinks an awful lot. Do you think I could get him out of the habit? I thought I might marry him and learn to love him after marriage. Please help me.

PATSY.

I will gladly help you if I can.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for published smart sayings. Address "Smart Sayings," Boston Evening American.

Little Mary—Why do they keep lions at the central telephone office?

Mother—Why do you ask such a question, Mary?

186 Spruce st., Watertown, Mass.

Patsy. You have been going steadily with your friend for nearly two years and he wants to marry you, yet he is absolutely inconsiderate of you when it comes to spending his Sundays and early evenings away from you. If he were really that way now, while he is courting you, do you think it likely he will be kind to you after he marries you and is sure of you? If you can't be happy with him now, would you be happy then? Long, lonely evenings and Sundays alone at home as his wife, while he went out without you?

Marriage does not change men, nor can any woman make a man and his habits over. Only he himself, can do that. This applies to excessive drinking, also. Wait until the right man comes along, Patsy. Why marry either of these two? Some day you will be glad you waited.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been reading your column every evening and wonder if you would help us out as you have helped others. Our question is a little different from those you have answered.

We are in love with our teacher, who is very nice. Sometimes she is so sweet to us, but other times she doesn't pay any attention at all to us.

There is a chum of ours whom she cares for and we want to see her love as she thinks more of this other girl than of us. Please tell us how we can get her to love us.

SAL AND VERGIE

IT is natural and right that you should like your teacher, girls, and even love her in a friendly way. But it sounds very silly to say you are in love with her. Try to avoid sentimental crushes and gushing friendships. I imagine your teacher chooses her intimate friends among men and women nearer her own age, but she has an affectionate feeling of good-will for all her pupils—especially those who work hard at their lessons. So study hard, girls, and in that way show your appreciation of your teacher and her work. Forget all about trying to win her love more than others, for that sort of talk is silly and second-rate—not worthy of either of you!

TRADE COULD PROSPER WITH LOWER PROFIT

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Business revives forecasting a record profit for corporations during 1929 might well point out that 1929 profits could be materially reduced and still be a tremendous profits. Ample proof of this can be found in Standard Statistics study showing net earnings of $1,185,000,000 for the nine months ended Sept. 7 reporters, 298 industrial, utility and railroad corporations. This figure would show a decrease of 2% per cent over the figures for the like period of 1928 a way from it. 1928 was itself counted a very prosperous year. We can have prosperity 25 per cent under current figures. Why despair of the possibilities of 1929?

STOCKS START LOWER, THEN STAGE RALLY

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, Nov. 19—Despite the confident feeling in business and financial circles, stocks slipped off to lower price levels in all sections of the market at the beginning of trading today, in continuation of Monday's moderate downward movement.

It was assumed that there was considerable profit-taking on stocks purchased at last week's low prices yet to be accomplished, though the small volume of sales was proof that there was little stock "overhanging the market." Stock sales in the first half, for example, totalled 533,000 shares, about 40 per cent as much as in some of last week's raging sessions.

It was announced officially that the President's conferences with railroad heads will take place as originally scheduled, despite the death of Secretary of War Good. It is also the intention of the President to push forward federal building projects in order to stimulate activity in the construction industry.

Most of the active industrial and and specialty stocks made their low prices of the day at the opening and then climbed back gradually to slightly higher levels. United States Steel, Eddie Corp., American Can and Westinghouse were leaders.

Moderate swings of the market's most famous bear stockpens were regarded as evidence that the stock market has been brought back to normal conditions.

The call loan renewal rate was set at 5 per cent, also a favorable sign from the money standpoint.

Industrial stocks improved their market position in late trading as the volume of trading slowed down and the ticker practically caught up with the market. American Can led a brilliant forward move of the list, Allied Chemical and numerous market favorites passed modestly above yesterday's final prices.

Steadier and industrial reports were generally favorable and commodity markets steady with cotton up 8 points.

COTTON PRICES RUN HIGHER

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Cotton was steady today at an advance of to 8 points after opening steady on cables from Liverpool and a private estimate of the ginnings prior to November 14 at 11,992,000 bales pointing to a crop of 14,500,000 to 14,600,000 bales running bales. The advance met realizing and perhaps some selling on the part of commission houses at the close of the stock market, but offerings were light and the market held about

SHAFFER HELD ON MANN ACT

Charles H Shaffer of Edison pk, Quincy, is under arrest here as a fugitive from justice from Kentucky on a charge of violation of the Mann act, it was announced today by Assistant United States Attorney Gen. William J. Donovan in charge of the Department of Justice here.

Shaffer is charged with violation of the Mann act, Donovan said, in connection with the disappearance of Grace White, 18 from Paducah, Ky., and her subsequent arrival in Boston.

Here's Rollcall of Developments, All Reassuring

National Prosperity May Be Preserved; Will Stocks Rebound?

By B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—These are the most important developments making for prosperity and the restoration of financial confidence:

Money, which was almost impossible to obtain at even 6 per cent a few weeks ago, is now offered and available under 3 per cent, a drop of fully one-third in cost.

Merchants' paper is discounted in New York at 5½ per cent, bankers' acceptances are down to 4½ to 4¾, call money loans were renewed over the week end at 4½ per cent (5 per cent) in more than 15 months, while funds later were offered privately at 4¼ per cent.

B. C. Forbes

In two weeks the Reserve Bank rediscount rate at New York was stepped down first, from 6 to 5, and then to 4½ per cent.

Brokers' loans, reduced $2,620,000,000 within a few months, are $4,172,000,000) the smallest in fully 18 months. All danger of further drastic withdrawals of "hot-hot" money is regarded as definitely past.

On Thursday and again on Friday very notable strength characterized dealings on the New York Stock Exchange. The turnover for the two days, under 10,000,000 shares, contrasted with the maximum of fully 16,400,000 in one day during the collapse, suggesting that order has been effectively restored.

So-called "average" quotations for representative industrial issues between September 19 and November 13 dropped no less than 250 points, equivalent to a shrinkage of more than 10 per cent. Railway issues meanwhile declined fully 50 points, or one-third. That is the severest deflation in all stock market history.

However, in the second half of last week these same industrials recovered an average of fully 40 points and rails 12 points, reflecting swift return to sanity from the insanity which seized the market earlier in the week.

In the highest financial circles arrangements were made to "peg" certain prices at stocks close to Wednesday's final levels, a development which had a most heartening effect upon the market.

The Stock Exchange governors' demand for complete information in short sellers' hands hailed with satisfaction and had a sobering influence on those who gratuitously sought to aggravate the demoralization.

Greater cheerfulness and confidence prevailed at the end of last week than had prevailed at any time since the debacle started.

First, Secretary Mellon announced a one per cent reduction in individual income taxes and one per cent in the present corporation rate of 12 per cent, accompanied by the statement that the Treasury regards prospects for both the 1930 and 1931 fiscal years tending June 30) as thoroughly satisfactory.

Finally, after the market closed on Friday came President Hoover's profoundly encouraging analysis of our national economic conditions and his call for a conference of the best industrial, financial, agricultural, labor and business brains of the country to take immediate steps to launch extensive building and other activities made feasible by the restoration of attractive money rates. Herbert Hoover learned, when Secretary of Commerce, not only how to handle business conferences, but how to produce men of affairs to take desirable action on a comprehensive scale. Therefore, his latest step is expected to bring results sufficient to avert any serious curtailment of industrial and general business activity.

The closing paragraph in President Hoover's statement appeals with peculiar force to hard-headed business men: "The next practical step is the organization and co-ordinating of a forward movement of business through the revival of construction activities, the stimulation of exports and of other legitimate business expansion, especially to take such action in concert with the use of our new powers to assist agriculture. Fortunately, the sound sense, the capacity and readiness for co-operation of our business leaders and governmental agencies gives assurance of action."

It is, of course, too early to tell how much effect the Wall Street happenings may have upon trade. Should the recovery in stock market values sustain no disturbing setback, it is entirely possible that national prosperity will not be at all deeply injured. That is no reason, however, why everything possible should not be done by everyone from President Hoover down to insure the normal flow of commerce and the continuance of normal employment and spending.

The prop in security prices has been so swift and so extreme that the recovery may likewise be more than ordinarily quick and substantial. The general assumption is that the stock market will drag along irregularly and sluggishly for months. It may—and then again it may not.

My humble guess is that it will do better than most people are at this distressful time disposed to think.

OUTLOOK FOR STEEL TRADE FOUND GOOD

New York, Oct. 19—Outlook for the steel industry is found good. A canvass reveals that steel authorities are not alarmed over recent reduction in mill activities. Operations must be considered seasonal and has attracted most attention because it has followed an unexpected period of peak production and deliveries, which could not be maintained any great length of time.

Operations today are good compared with former years. There has been a steady increase in manufacturing facilities, and activity today is actually higher than a year ago, so far as total production is concerned, because additional mill companies have been expanded steadily the past 12 months.

There seems to come further reductions in ingot production before end of the year, particularly if specifications against contracts are slow. At end of the year a shutdown for a week or more may be decided upon by some mills, but even this would not be out of line with former years, because Christmas holiday seasons in the past steel companies often have taken advantage of condition to check stock inventories and make minor repairs postponed while operations were running along steadily.

That buyers have become somewhat cautious and that this can be attributed to spectacular declines in securities cannot be denied. Letup in new orders has not been particularly large as yet, but effect of this caution is seen greater time taken by consumers who have had orders on books of the companies in specifying for deliveries on old contracts.

This is not unusual in view of years expressed that the break in the stock market would find reflection in business and industrial conditions in coming weeks. Various indications are being watched closely by users of steel, and should the situation prove better than they anticipated, it is likely these interests again will enter the market actively with contracts and specifications.

Larger consumers of steel have not changed their buying policies. Railroads will take tonnages contracted for in rails, track accessories, locomotives and cars, because replacements of track and equipment will be necessary to keep running. The carriers are expecting good traffic and are negotiating for financing. Canadian concerns, notably American and Continental, have placed tentative orders for fabricated steel in plate. This business will not be added to books of makers until specifications are received early next month next year, but it is evident these consumers are looking ahead for tonnages.

Stability prevails in the price situation.

Transamerica After 500,000 Investors

New York, Nov. 19—The Interoast Trading Corp., in connection with efforts to obtain 500,000 stockholders for Transamerica Corp., has issued a circular disclosing a summary of the latter's holdings in its principal banking subsidiaries and their investment affiliates.

It shows Transamerica Corp. owns 99.60 per cent of stock of Bank of Italy and National Bank-Italy Co., 97.29 per cent of stock of Bank of America National Trust and Corporation of America, and 49.30 per cent of stock of Bank of America, National Association, New York, and Bancamerica-Blair Corp.

Total assets of Transamerica Corp. are placed at $1,162,940,359 September 30, 1929, with no liabilities except to stockholders. On that date there were 23,190,477 shares outstanding.

Assets of considerably more than $2,000,000,000 are listed for the more important institutions controlled by Transamerica Corp., while consolidated earnings of corporations now grouped under this holding company are indicated at $71,805,347 during 1928, against $34,023,310 during 1927, and $11,373,482 during 1926. These figures are after provision for federal taxes and contingencies in each case, but in some instances full earnings are not included but only dividends paid by the controlled corporations.

SILENCE FOR RESTAURANTS IS PLANNED

No longer are the ears of customers in the Foltis-Fischer chain of self-service restaurants to be assailed by the raucous cries of countermen. An order to the cook for scrambled eggs on toast will no longer be shouted loudly as "An Adam and Eve on a raft. Wreck 'em." No more will the cook be advised of a customer desire for a cup of coffee by a yell of "One Java. Draw it in the dark." A call of "Spoons up" will cease to be a signal to the dishwasher that a shortage of spoons exists at the counter.

Instead, all such communications between countermen and the kitchen will be transmitted in an dulcet tones as the countermen can command, through microphones, strategically placed at intervals behind the counter and connected with a loudspeaker in the kitchen and dish washing room.

The experiment is to be tried in the new restaurant of the Foltis-Fischer chain, its 21st store, which is now undergoing alterations at 411-413 Fourth ave., New York city. If it proves successful, the system will be installed in other restaurants.

N. E. ECONOMIC PARLEY HUGE

Business and economic problems of New England will be threshed out in the most extensive parley ever held in the six States, when representatives of all New England industrial and commercial activities meet Thursday in the Hotel Statler for the fifth conference of the New England Council.

Governors of each New England State will address the conference following an executive session with the council.

Redfield Proctor, president of the council, will then open the session. Henry I. Harriman, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, will give the address of welcome.

Governor Allen will tell of "Massachusetts in New England." Governor William G. Tudor of Maine, Gov. Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire, Gov. John Weeks of Vermont, Gov. Norman S. Case of Rhode Island, and Governor John H. Trumbull of Connecticut will tell of their States' activities.

President Proctor will deliver his annual address and the delegates will be introduced by the States' vice-presidents.

E. Vin F. Gay, professor of economics at Harvard, and director of research of the Harvard bureau of economic research, will speak on "What Does Business Stabilization Mean to New England." The council carries on some of its work through co-operating committees, representing major economic interests or agencies, and the chairmen of the important committees will speak. Startin, at 6:30 there will be a series of state conferences and dinner when delegates, associate members and guests with their governors and members of the state councils preside.

Friday morning at 9:30 there will be a series of group meetings, the topics of discussion being agriculture, community development, industry and recreational development.

Cambridge Man Gets Five-Year Jail Term

Ralph T. Sorell of Cambridge was sentenced to State prison to three to five years by Judge Fosdick, in the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court, at East Cambridge, on a burglary charge. William K. Williams, also of Cambridge, convicted of complicity in breaking and entering the clothing store of Nathan Wineman in Cambridge, on Oct. 30, and the larceny of wearing apparel. Last week Williams was given from 10 to 20 years in State prison.

New Action Against Bankers' Capital Co.

New York, Nov. 19—Involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were brought against the Bankers' Capital Co. of Connecticut, the second such action to be instituted against a member of the chain of corporations through which federal and State authorities charge patrons have lost more than $6,000,000 in security deals.

The Bankers' Capital Corp. of Wall Street, parent of the 12 or more concerns in the chain, was closed by a similar action a week ago.

Flies to His New Position in Cuba

Havana, Nov. 19—Harry P. Guggenheim, new American ambassador to Cuba, arrived in Havana in a specially chartered plane of the Pan-American Airways, to take up the post left vacant by the resignation of Col. Noble Brandon Judah early last summer.

With Mrs. Guggenheim and their two secretaries, he made the flight from Key West, Fla., to Cuba in 67 minutes.

Protects Employes

Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. has notified its employes that it will protect them against further loss of Kroger stock purchased by them as an investment.

Pioneers of Aviation Are Made Special Cram's Study

Detroit, Nov. 19—The early stages of practically every project, development or industry have been dominated by individual efforts, but never has this been so true as in the field of aviation, according to Cram's Aeronautical Reporter, Detroit economic service. The pioneers who have brought forth what is today a finely developed art, science and industry have achieved their ultimate aim working alone, and usually against great odds.

For this reason, the work of one man is always adding progress to his successors, hardly ever gained the advantage of collaboration with another's efforts. Furthermore, there was little sympathy for the dreamer or inventor who had ambitions of defying the elements and of conquering space. Too often, hard minded, literal people defeated the efforts of one who might have advanced the knowledge of aeronautics many years.

* * *

From the first adventurous soul who risked his life in a balloon of crazy construction to test its buoyancy, the chronicle of aviation's advances has been the same. A long period of trial and error, interposed with experiments with parachutes saw few persons working on aerodynamic principles at the same time.

The closest approach to contemporary efficient use of the air stage of progress when gliders in elementary form began to attract the attention of a few men who forgetful of life and limb in their enthusiasm to solve the mysteries of air currents and flights. This was probably the most important stage in the forward progression of aeronautical knowledge, for the principles learned by these men at this time were the foundation that led to motored flight.

* * *

Practically the first instance of united effort in the field of aeronautical research came about through a blood relationship. Two brothers, whose main interest had first to do with bicycles, turned their mechanical talents into other channels. Their work was individual in that they labored practically alone until it began to appear that success was to crown their efforts. Even then the attention they attracted was at first so widely heralded, though it marked the definite separation between experiment and solution.

From this time on, step by step, each rapid advance in aviation has been largely brought about by individual efforts. It is needless and practically impossible to cite each and every contribution which has been made by outstanding individuals, but the measurement of the whole is a sure guide to the sum of the parts. In the total picture, the feats of stunt, long distance, transocean and endurance fliers have played a most important and prominent part in bringing aviation to the general public, not as a mysterious art, but as a safe and sound investment. How in its infancy.

PENSIONS BAR MEN OVER 45

It is not due to unwillingness of employers to hire them that men over 45 find it hard to get work, C. R. Dooley, manager of industrial relations for the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, told the Industrial Relations Conference of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches in Fighting Graft.

Three factors make employment of this class of workmen difficult, said Dooley.

These three factors, he said, are pension systems which automatically bar the prospective employe over 45, a system of promotion from within the organization which makes available only openings at the very bottom of the organization, and the general prejudice in favor of older men which make it difficult for industry to help them.

Speaking of the case of Clarence "The Piece of Older Men and Women in Industry," Dooley declared:

"In our own company we have a pension plan that provides a pension after 25 years' service with compulsory retirement at 65. This automatically has barred a man over 45 from employment."

'Favor Slayer' Gets Life Sentence

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 19—Thomas Mericle, 35, who hired William Mericle of Dayton, O., to kill Edward McCrumb, 49, for $500 "as a personal favor," was convicted of first degree murder and was sentenced to a life term in the Michigan branch prison at Marquette.

Mericle confessed that he killed McCrumb by beating him over the head with a metal pipe, also was sentenced to a life term. Mericle and Delehanty were charged with Mrs. McCrumb and promised him $500 from McCrumb's $2000 insurance policy.

Mrs. McCrumb was acquitted of participation in the crime through a direct verdict.

Cort, Theater Man, Dies in New York

New York, Nov. 18—John Cort, who first gained fame as a theater manager more than 40 years ago by his enterprises in installing in his Seattle theater "the new Edison incandescent lights," is dead here.

He was said to have organized in 1888 the first vaudeville circuit ever formed in this country, to have built the Grand Opera House in Seattle and to have founded the Fraternal Order of Eagles, serving as its first grand worthy president.

Child May Reunite Estranged Parents

Brockton, Nov. 19—A dark-haired and brown-eyed two-year-old boy may yet be the means of a reconciliation between Mrs. Pearl Rose of Temple st., this city, and her estranged husband, Everett E. Rose of Bridgewater. There are cross petitions in the case of living apart for justifiable cause, desertion and custody of the child.

In the probate court here before Judge Loyed E. Chamberlain, Mrs. Rose at first flatly refused to entertain a suggestion that she go back to live with her husband, but later said that she would do so for the sake of the baby boy.

Student Is Fined on Liquor Charge

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 19—William Sherman of Crown Point, Indiana, one of the University of Illinois students arrested on charges of illegally possessing and selling liquor during a raid on the Gamma Eta Gamma Fraternity House, Sunday, pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $200 and costs. Charges against the other two students were dismissed.

SCHAFFNER IS CHEERFUL ON OUTLOOK

"The shrinkage," he says, "in the market value of securities has been tremendous, and the effect on the business of the country is difficult of appraisal now, but in my opinion it will not be of long duration. Certainly for a time there will be buying hesitancy and the Christmas trade, particularly in luxuries, will be smaller than it would have been under happier circumstances. There has been no change, however, in the wealth producing factors of the nation and the recession should be short-lived, because the fundamentals of our activities in this direction.

"And so, it is my opinion, that holders of good securities in sound well-managed businesses have no cause for concern. The shift in the stock market has not erased their realized earnings or their earning power. American corporations generally are in the strongest financial condition of their history. Business grown over a reasonable period of time is inevitable, and participations in the ownership of good business will be worth more with the years."

BOMB CHINESE FROM THE AIR

Shanghai, Nov. 19 — Soviet forces attacked the western Manchurian frontier, 5000 infantry crossing the border and artillery shelling Chalanor. Airplane bombers were also active.

The Chalanor rail station was destroyed. Chinese forces, it is believed, suffered sharp losses. The Chinese Eastern railway was cut while Manchuli telegraphic communication was interrupted.

It was reported that Chang Hsueh Liang, governor of Manchuria has ordered 10,000 fur-lined uniforms for the Chinese 7th defense troops" on the western front as a result of intense cold in that area.

Would Drive 'Frats' From High School

New Bedford, Nov. 19—New Bedford high school fraternities may be outlawed again if Principal G. Walter Williams of the school can induce the school committee to look at the student societies in the same light that he does.

Williams made it no secret that he feels the fraternities are a bad influence in high school politics. For many years the school department rules "outlawed" fraternities in the school, but a few years back, the committee gave them a clean bill of health.

AT THE DIAL

By THE RADIO EDITOR

FOR the past three months, those on the inside in the radio industry have been looking for a startling announcement regarding television. Today we have word from the Westinghouse Company which seems to indicate that practical television is at hand. The new system is apparently a great advance in simplicity and cleanness over the prevailing type of scanning disc receiver. The announcement promises television which can be viewed by a room full of spectators. It was announced today by Dr. Vladimir Zworykin, research engineer of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, to members of the Institute of Radio Engineers. The use of a cathode ray tube as a receiver gives this new type of television apparatus an advantage over the well-known scanning disc method of visual broadcasting.

Dr. Zworykin foresees the possibility of flashing the images on a motion picture screen so that theaters may receive television broadcasts of important events immediately after a film of the scene is printed. These visual broadcasts would be synchronized with sound.

A medley of selections from the musical comedy "New Moon" will be featured in the WJZ and WBZ broadcast through WJZ at 7 o'clock. Paul Van Loan directs the orchestra. Milton Watson will sing two tenor solos in the program.

A SHORT STORY by Mary E. Wilkins will be offered to radio listeners at 7:30, when the Sooconyland Sketch presents a new radio drama, "The Doormat," through WBZ and northeastern network of stations served by the National Broadcasting Co. "The Doormat" is drawn from Miss Wilkins' story "Coronation," and is regarded as one of her best pieces of work.

Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson will be the featured artists of the Blackstone program at 8 o'clock over WNAC and the Columbia System. Alice Sawyer, engaged to John Pearson, eagerly she looks forward to her marriage until she elopes. But when her mother becomes ill, Alice is confronted by a problem which threatens to wreck her life. What is she to do? Remain at home to care for her mother, or marry John?

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

Defends 'Pure' Code

BRUNDAGE ASSAILS ENEMIES

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 19—A spirited defense of the amateur code and sharp criticism of its attackers was delivered by Avery Brundage, national president of the Amateur Athletic Union, at the annual convention banquet.

"During the last few years it has become increasingly popular to attack the amateur code," said Brundage, a former national amateur all-around champion. "Based on one side by the professional promoters seeking to commercialize its popularity, the second group, harassed from the other direction by prominent athletes seeking by evasion and chicanery to obtain the material rewards of professionalism while maintaining their amateur standing, amateur sport finds its burdens increased instead of relieved, by the press, and it will suffer a moral loss if these assaults upon amateurism by those who have it within their power to educate the public, do not cease.

WRITERS CRITICISED

"Some newspaper writers have advocated the abolition of the amateur code and the elimination of the distinction between professionals and amateurs so far as the public is concerned. Editorials have been written referring to the amateur code as a joke and stating that there are no longer any amateurs."

"It is asserted that our amateur rules are producing a race of cheats and liars. The amateur code has been coupled with the Volstead act as an agent tending to break down the respect for law and the Amateur Athletic Union has been denounced for attempting to uphold so archaic a system.

"When the A. A. U. or any other sport governing body disciplines a prominent athlete for violating amateur rules, it is hailed as a merciless tyrant and a betrayer of the public interest. There is an astounding lack of clear thinking on this subject and after reading a few articles, one ceases to wonder that the public is bewildered and confused. We need to be brought back to fundamental principles."

ADMITS MISTAKES

The Amateur Athletic Union has made mistakes. It has been taken advantage of by individuals and by organizations, but through all the years it has held tenaciously and unwaveringly to the ideals and ideas of its founders. It will be as sad and sorry day for this great land of ours when we reach the stage where we cannot even play without thinking of the ever-present dollar.

"There must be some regeneration if we are to repel the iconoclasts. If we give way and amateur sport is swamped in the modern tide of commercialism, our civilization is headed for the same decline that overtook the Greek empire.

Gabby Hartnett to Lose Tonsils

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—Gabby Hartnett, Chicago Cub catcher, will have his tonsils removed sometime this week in an effort to be sure for the ball players ailing arm, which handicapped him during his 1929 campaign.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON,
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

The pitched shot, of any character, becomes more a matter of act clubhead action than of me chanical club swinging. You want the blade to go through the ball smoothly, therefore you must be careful never to let head or body move. Since the plane is open, there is little pivot. In executing these shots go about it this way: Put your clubhead in place back of the ball, then fix a spot in the turf directly back of the ball. Now imagine your clubhead to be flat—a pancake affair, and determine that your body, the clubhead flat down against the spot on the turf back of the ball then through. All meaning through. And always when swinging the irons it is good practice to design to swing the clubhead directionally from the inside of the line outward. The club will keep the clubhead going straight through though it appears to go diagonally through. This yields good right shoulder action.

Our Economic Parliament

The Fifth New England Conference

A THOUGHT which must have occurred to many is how much the "small preliminary conference" of leaders of industry, agriculture and labor, which President Hoover has called for the present week, resembles in purpose New England's "conferences," the FIFTH of which will be held in Boston on Thursday and Friday.

The President summons the Nation's leaders, to a meeting with officials of the Federal Government, "with a view to the co-ordination of business and governmental agencies in concerted action for continued business progress."

The New England Conference, assembled at the call of the New England Council, meets for the purpose of considering the present status and the outlook for the future of New England commerce, industry and agriculture.

"Maintenance of prosperity through organized effort" is the aim of the NEW ENGLAND conference, as it is also the animating purpose at WASHINGTON.

Whatever your field of endeavor, you may be sure it will be represented at the Hotel Statler. There will be State conferences as well as general conferences. Fifteen hundred citizens, the leading men of the Six States, will take part.

The men who built the New England Council, under the auspices of which the Conferences are held, must have observed with interest and encouragement that it is Washington's hope that the meeting this week in the Nation's capital will "consider the advisability of establishing a PERMANENT council, whose chief function would be to keep the country's business on an even keel."

If our understanding is correct, this means that New England, in establishing a Council out of which has come these annual Conferences, was four years ahead of the rest of the country. The founders of the Council were men of courage and vision.

The proceedings of the Fifth New England Conference will be followed with interest by every New Englander. They will be alive with meaning and significance to every activity of this section.

Want a Job?

It May NEVER Seek You Out in Your Chamber

HOW did Frank A. Goodwin, bounced from a State board by one Governor, come to be appointed by that Governor's successor to the chairmanship of the Boston Finance Commission?

THEY gave ALL the credit to Governor Allen.

It would never do to choose a second-rater to take the place of John C. L. Dowling—so the "experts" pictured Governor Allen as reasoning—and picking Goodwin meant the elimination of a potential rival, who in last year's primary received 170,000 Republican votes.

REASONABLE enough, but NOT the way it happened.

Dined by his friends of the Commonwealth Service Association, Mr. Goodwin told a story which may cause a stampede to the Executive Department at the State House.

"I CALLED upon Governor Allen," he said, "and I ASKED for the place. All that the Governor said was that I was to feel myself under obligation to no one. The only thing HE asked was that I should DO MY DUTY."

So, credit for the Goodwin appointment must be divided—we would not want to say 50-50, but divided—between the appointing power and the appointee.

And the moral may be that it does not always pay to WAIT for Opportunity's knock.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

There has been a lot of free medical advice seeping through the telephones in the last 30 years.

The usual gag is to call up the doctor and ask, "How's your folks?" and then tell him what's the matter with yours.

At the homeopathic rate of five cents per call you could load yourself with clinical information that would keep you happy for weeks.

You call up the family custodian and say, "Hello, Doc, I'm sick."

He diagnoses, "Contagious or prescription?"

You complain, "I'm smothering."

So it costs you a dollar to have the doctor tell you that you are in a normal condition in a telephone booth.

What we wanted to know is the amount charged for a second visit.

It's going to be very convenient to stick out a white tongue in a telephone booth and have an old lady crash you over the derby with an umbrella.

You call up the old tribal healer, who hasn't been on a busy wire in years, and tell him you cannot hear.

When he mentions the dollar, your hearing gets worse. A buzzing in the ears may mean too much quinine or it may mean an electrical storm in Dakota.

We will have to get that famous book, what to do until the doctor arrives, from the circulating library because the doctor ain't going to arrive.

H. G. Wells Writes on "The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

BUT as they spread they become cut off from their blood-supply, for the capillaries do not extend into the epidermis. Only the deepest epidermal cells are properly nourished; the others are all in various stages of starvation. The most superficial cells being remotest from the blood-stream, actually die, the outermost layer being composed of dead cells.

Now these dead cells are dry and horny; They form a rampart between the outer world and the living tissue. These cell corpses are ordinarily brushed away as they die; but when they are allowed to accumulate, as under a bandage which is not undone for many days, they form dense white masses of flaky scurf or scarf-skin, showing to what an extent our bodies die daily. The epidermal cells are the martyr volunteers of the cell community. It is their sole business to multiply and perish so that their corpses may protect the state.

Sometimes, through a cut or a scratch, the bacteria lurking in the air or on our skins make an entry, whereupon there follows a battle royal in our tissues. The first response to any injury to the epidermis is a dilation of the capillary vessels in that region. Chemical products of the injured stuff stimulate them to dilate. By thus increasing the local blood-flow reinforcements of white corpuscles are at once rushed to the affected spot.

More and more leucocytes are brought to the battle area, which becomes "sore and inflamed." The bacteria, keeping on and extending their footing, multiply in the tissues and destroy tissue cells; the leucocytes frantically consume both bacteria and debris, and in excess of zeal perish themselves of indigestion.

At the end of a day or two we find a mass of dead and dying bacteria and cells, a mass that is disintegrating into the yellowish fluid called "matter" or pus, and round this mass we find a cordon of living leucocytes, sheathing it and hemming it in so that there can be no further spread of the trouble.

Finally, since the blood supply of the skin lying over the abscess is now quite cut off, the skin breaks down and the abscess "points," discharging its contents into the outer world. Mr. Everyman washes it, ties it up and does his best to forget it.

But not always do the leucocytes prevail. And then the bacteria may succeed in invading the blood stream, and once they have got access to blood vessels they are swept around the body and all the tender tissues of Mr. Everyman are at their mercy.

This is when the warfare becomes really serious for him. Leucocytes join issue with the bacteria in the blood, fresh armies of leucocytes are formed in the bone marrow, the lymph glands and other special centers of proliferation, and at the same time there is a chemical battle between toxins (poisons) and antitoxins. The whole body becomes the seat of war.

The power to swallow up and destroy hostile cells is not confined to these phagocytes which wander about in blood and tissue.

In the spleen there are localized cells which take in any undesirable bodies from the blood that circulates past them.

During recurrent fever, for example, the spleen cells are found to be full of the organisms responsible for that complaint. The two parts of our interior surfaces which are most exposed to infection are also protected in this way, for cells in the liver exercise a similar filtering power on blood from the intestine, and so do cells in the lungs.

Moreover, the walls of our intestines are dotted with special oval areas where leucocytes can be formed when necessary. These guard-houses are called Peyer's patches. Presumably this is because of the bacteria that swarm in our digestive tubes, warmed by our own heat and taking our food not only out of our mouths but out of our very bowels. To an organism able to resist our digestive juices—and there are many such—the tender intestinal wall affords an easier way of entry into our blood than the horny skin, and it is therefore necessary to garrison strongly that weak point in our defences.

The tonsils of the throat and the appendix at the entrance to the large intestine also are composed entirely of leucocyte-forming tissue of this kind. They are particularly strong salients on the line of defensive fortification. So at nearly every vulnerable point Mr. Everyman is garrisoned against his smallest (and greatest) enemies.

H. G. Wells

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

"ONE comfort in being a golf-widow," remarked Mrs. Divot, glancing after the receding form of her husband, "is that you know that you're only second in a man's affections—not the forty-second. He's too tired at nights to wonder if he's missing something, or if he's bored, or if he ought to be having his 'fling.'"

"Yes," agreed Mrs. Green, "if John ever recovers from his grande passion for golf, I shall begin to worry about him. A man has to have SOME outlet for his superfluous energy and emotions—and golf is safer than blondes or night-clubs.

"Nowadays, I've noticed, the average man expects to have a 'fling,' like the flu, at least one, annually. And there are chronic subjects to whom life is just one long, continuous fling.

"It used to be a popular conviction that a young man had to 'have his fling,' just as a child had to have the measles or the whooping cough, but that once he got OVER it, he was immune forever. If he could get it out of his system, along with his tonsils and his adenoids, the chances of the after-effects were greatly minimized.

A mild fling at twenty was supposed to land a man a lifetime. And when he showed any symptoms of a recurrent attack, he was admonished that he had "HAD his fling."

"But all that is over! Marrying a man with a dark brown past no longer assures you that he will have a lily-white future, or that you will be able to sleep peacefully nights, in the sweet confidence that your husband's habits are all 'set' and that his youthful gullibilities have boiled down and thoroughly jelled.

"That's funny!" said Mrs. Divot. "Once a woman has had her quota of youthful adventures and romances, and has settled down to one man, she is usually contented to stay put."

"I'm not so sure," retorted Mrs. Green. "The 'fling' is no longer an exclusively masculine malady. Lots of middle-aged women appear to be going in for a gay Indian summer these days. So afraid they may have missed something, you know!

"But the only thing saddder and funnier than the sight of a respectable 'husband-and-father-ly-looking' man with a bald spot, trying to play the coltish Lothario to a bored flapper is the vision of a plump, motherly-looking matron being arch and kittenish with a sleek-haired young gigolo."

"That's the tragedy of this day and age!" sighed Mrs Divot. "Nobody is willing to grow middle-aged gracefully: everybody seems bent on growing old DISgracefully!"

"Yes," admitted Mrs. Green sadly, "a youthful fling is as natural as a baby's teething, but a fling at forty or fifty, like a belated case of measles, goes hard and makes you rather ridiculous! And it's SUCH a strain on the heart!"

God of Wealth and Butter

It Reminds You of Wall Street

(Copyright, 1929)

THIS TIBETAN GOD REPRESENTS WEALTH.

In Far Tibet, where life is hard, the people are intensely superstitious, and one man in four is in one of many monasteries, calling himself a lama, and living on those that work. The lamas, to amuse the people, celebrate once a year the "Butter Festival."

Tibetan sculptors produce idols like the one you see here, showing in yak butter, highly colored, the different Tibetan Gods.

The yak is the animal on which all Tibetans rely. A powerful animal, with long fur, it carries burdens, plows and gives milk and butter, the latter plentifully sprinkled with yak hairs, usually.

It is the God of Wealth that you see here, made of yak butter. His name is Drapukolo. To worship him is supposed to bring good fortune in a financial way.

As you see him here, he is exhibited for one night only, then melted up, and, probably, eaten, by those that exhibited him.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—Broadway has become suddenly blackmail shy. Philanderers who used to pay right down to the quick when sweeties grew avaricious are now showing up at the district attorney's office and putting their cards on the table. Blackmail is usually paid when the victim is in a panic.

Records show nothing calls the bluff of blackmailers as neatly as referring them to direct dealings with a capable lawyer. The high rewards of the sinister calling have been due to the fact that those annoyed try to deal directly with the tormentors.

For the sake of innocent wives and often equally innocent children, the good sport takes a clip on the chin, gets a signed release and resolves to be a better boy. The gouge, however, has been overworked. Men out for a merry evening with loose ladies find themselves in a nice fix.

Their wives report receiving mysterious phone calls and perfumed notes are sent to homes until, in desperation, they cough up. Adroit gold diggers are often able to gather in a half dozen gullibles, which beats stringing along a lone sucker. And such diversion!

Tables were turned during the past year on four greedy sirens who were told coldly to do their worst. The "worst" was a picture of the victims in a day's tabloid sensation but resulting in a backfire of the records of the ladies which did not look well in print.

The biters were bitten—and they didn't get a sou. Added to this was the boomerang of having methods exposed and putting them under the careful espionage of the police. A great criminal lawyer says the only escape from blackmail is to make a clean breast of derelictions to wives.

Then immediately seek protection of the police and district attorney, who have bureaus where such threats are treated sub rosa. Records of any payments should be put in their hands. In a ten-year period, New York is said to have paid ten millions in blackmail. Ooch!

One of the most expensive cigars in the market is elaborately wrapped in gold leaf and retailing for two bernice. For special bangers the same concern fashions an 18-inch cigar that sells for $5 each. A rich theatrical man burns up three of the $5 selections daily. You know, deep thinking!

A tobacco dealer with a Park ave. clientele reports he has not more than a dozen discriminating cigar smokers of another day—the sort who, before purchasing, used to pinch, examine the leaf under a strong light and sniff rapturously at the prospective smoke. The cigarette craze is blamed.

Yet the same informant declares few cigarette smokers burn up more than a package a day. He has heard of those who consume 60 and 90 a day, but knew only one with such an appetite. "I was one of his pall bearers," he observed significantly.

He further announces that chewing tobacco is almost extinct in high circles. He does not sell a half dozen plugs a year. Kin Hubbard once said there is just as much chewing as ever but fewer white beards and white vests.

Inwood, which is the uptown Dyckman st. section glorified in Vina Delmar's "Kept Woman," evidently does not resent the chiffon chimers of the ladies in love with love which the movie created. A drug store heralds the Vina Delmar sundae and a little gown shop is to be called The Vina Delmar. Inwood, it might be added, is chiefly a community of self-respecting people with a neighborly flair, and is not hard boiled.

Grantland Rice's beautiful daughter Florence has a bit in Ring Lardner's biz show and make it hum. Rice and Lardner have neighboring estates at East Hampton.

It is 2 a. m. In the next block they are blasting in two building excavations. A gang of workers under my window are cutting through asphalt with one of those deafening drills. Hourly torpedos explode along Grand Central tracks. If something isn't done I have a notion to make a statement to the papers.
